COMMITTEE PLANS ALTERNATIVE TAX ON WAR PROFITS

Disposed to Write Both That and Excess Profits Levy Into Revenue Bill.

HIGHER RATE TO PREVAIL

Treasury Would Apply Tax Yielding Greater Return in Individual Cases.

TO REACH ALL CONCERNS

New Schedule Based on English System—No Change Made in Transportation Tax.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—There will be a war profits tax, based upon the English system, as well as an excess profits tax, written into the $8,000,000,000 War Revenue bill, in all probability, said Representative Henry T. Rainey, who today acted as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, which is preparing the measure. Mr. Kitchin, the Chairman, is slightly ill.

This elective system of taxation, originally recommended by the Treasury Department, would be adopted as the only way to justly reach all taxable corporations. Mr. Rainey said many corporations were making less money than before the war, and therefore would not pay as heavy a tax under the English system as under the excess profits plan based upon capital. Many of the larger corporations made more money just prior to the war than since, because the price-fixing system has reduced their profits. On the other hand, a vast number of small corporations have made greater profits since the war, and an excess profits tax based on capital would not give as large a revenue to the Government as a tax on the war profits.

The Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Rainey said, was seriously considering writing the two systems into the bill and authorizing the Treasury Department to elect which system to impose in each case. In other words, the Treasury Department would be empowered to decide whether the excess profits tax, ranging from 30 to 80 per cent., or the war profits tax should be levied.

The committee has already tentatively agreed to the following excess profit tax:

A specific exemption of $2,000 plus 10 per cent. on the amount of invested capital and upon the rates as follows: Thirty per cent, upon the net income in excess of exemptions and not in excess of 20 per cent. of the net income; 50 per cent. upon the net income in excess of 20 per cent. and not in excess of 25 per cent.; 80 per cent. on the net income in excess of 25 per cent.

The English war profits tax, now under consideration, would be superimposed on the excess profits tax in such a way that the taxpayer would be required to pay whichever tax was higher. It embodies these ideas: " Sixty to 80 per cent. on the difference between the average percentum of profits for the best four of the six years (to be selected by the corporation) 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916, and the profits for the taxable year, with 10 per cent. deduction on the capital put in since 1916."

May Rewrite War Profits Tax.

The above is not acceptable to majority sentiment in the committee, and it is believed that the war profits tax will be entirely rewritten. It was said today that the tax might reach as high as 80 per cent. Nothing will be done by the committee in respect to this alternative tax until a complete report as to war profits and profiteering has been received from the Treasury Department.

In the absence of Chairman Kitchin, the committee made very little progress today in the consideration of the bill. Passing to special taxes, the committee decided not to increase the taxes on freight and passenger rates for the reason that these rates have been increased to the public by recent advances made by Director General McAdoo.

It was also determined to postpone action on taxes on beverages, with indications that the committee finally would impose taxes totalling more than a billion on alcoholic and other beverages.

"We discussed the question of transportation first and we left the transportation tax just as it is—3 per cent. on the amount paid for transportation by freight. We did not increase the tax on transportation of passengers. We did this for the reason that the Director General of Railroads under authority granted him has already increased the freight charges 25 per cent. and passenger charges 50 per cent. The rate

The Kaiser and Lincoln Contrasted In Letters to Sorrowing Mothers

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 29.—A letter written by the Kaiser to a German woman who has lost nine sons in the war is now going the rounds of the European press. It is particularly interesting to Americans because of its sharp contrast to the famous letter of President Lincoln to Mrs. Bixby during the American civil war. The Kaiser is "gratified," and sends his photograph. Lincoln was grieved, and, as I recall Lincoln's letter, it did not occur to him that his picture would relieve the desolation of Mrs. Bixby.

I send you the text of the Kaiser's letter:

The Kaiser's Letter.

" His Majesty the Kaiser hears that you have sacrificed nine sons in defense of the Fatherland in the present war. His Majesty is immensely gratified at the fact, and in recognition is pleased to send you his photograph, with frame and autograph signature."

Frau Meter, who received the letter, has now joined the street beggars in Delmenhors-Oldenburg, to get a living.

Lincoln's Letter.

Dear Madam—I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

ADMITS THEY CAN'T SINK TRANSPORTS

German Naval Chief Says We Have Too Many Points of Embarkation.

OUR CONVOYS TOO STRONG

All These Factors Make Hazard for Submarines Too Great—Denies Failure of U-Boats.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—The Chief of the German Admiralty Staff, Admiral von Holtzendorff, has explained to the Cologne Gazette, to the best of his ability, the reason why German U-boats are not sinking American transports.

He says that owing to the many points of debarkation that are at the disposal of the Americans from the North of Scotland to the Mediterranean, the irregularity of the coming of the transports, and the strong destroyer guards which accompany them, it is inexpedient for the U-boats to lurk off all these harbors on the chance of getting a shot at them. The real object of the U-boats, adds the Admiral, is to reduce enemy cargo space, for on this depends the ability of the Allies to continue the war.

In explaining why so few American transports have been sunk the German Chief of Staff said:

Convoys Come In Irregularly.

" The Americans have at their disposal for debarkation the coastal region from the northern point of Scotland to the French Mediterranean ports, with dozens of debarkation places. Must we put our boats to lurk off these harbors on the chance of getting shot at by the strongly guarded convoys of fast American transports? The convoys do not come with the regularity and frequency of railway trains at a big railway station, but irregularly, with long interruptions, and often by night and in fog.

" When one remembers all that, one realizes what little prospect of success it offers to set the U-boats especially at American transports.

" We must always remember that it is the task of our U-boats to reduce the entire cargo space in the enemy's service, for on this depends his existence and ability to carry on the war."

Admiral von Holtzendorff when asked to reply to a statement attributed to the British Admiral, Sir John Jellicoe, the former First Sea Lord, that the U-boat war was a failure, that it had ceased to constitute a danger, and that more U-boats were being destroyed than were being built, said:

" The statement is incorrect, and if credited would prove a fatal error for our opponents. The fact is that merely by appropriating neutral tonnage the situation has undergone a temporary amelioration, especially regarding military supplies from America."

Admiral von Holtzendorff asserted that the German policy in attacking every ship sailing in the enemy's serv-

AMSTERDAM, July 29, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—Captain von Beerfelde, who was recently prosecuted for spreading the Lichnowsky memoirs in Germany but who for some mysterious reason has been set free, has sent a remarkable petition to the Reichstag.

" The Reichstag must decide that Germany's leaders in 1914 must be ruthlessly prosecuted," he declares, " for they were guilty of the most criminal forgery and the most abominable swindle. They are traitors and criminals. I also demand the arrest of Bethmann Hollweg. Should the Reichstag refuse to take these wishes into consideration it will be sure to incur the most damning judgment of all future German generations."

Captain von Beerfelde, whom the war has turned into a pacifist, fought bravely and won the first-class iron cross. He admits that his eyes were opened to many terrible truths by the Lichnowsky memoirs and now demands that the Reichstag shall interfere and inquire into the crimes committed by German statesmen in the Summer of 1914 with the sole object of bringing about the world war.

The full text of von Beerfelde's petition is not published. Only short extracts are supplied in Die Wahrheit, a weekly journal published by Wilhelm Brühn, a National Liberal member of the Reichstag, but its contents are easy to guess from the sentences quoted. It bears the title " A Necessary Rectification of the First German White Paper," and ends:

" Should the Reichstag refuse to take all this into consideration I would then ask for my family's passports to Switzerland, because free men can no longer live in the German Fatherland and because we do not want to be made responsible before history for Germany's present shame and dishonor."

Few papers dare publish extracts. It is asked: " Why is this dangerous lunatic allowed to run about free? " The editor of Wie Wahrheit himself urges the Government to lock up the talkative Captain before it is too late.

REPORT TURKEY BREAKS AWAY FROM GERMANY

London Hears by Way of Copenhagen That the Relations Have Been Severed.

RECENT CLASHES ACUTE

LONDON, July 29.—" The relations between Germany and Turkey have been severed, according to direct information from Constantinople."

This announcement is made by the Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The excitement in Turkey against Germany, the advices further say, has been growing, particularly after last week's events. The Germans recently demanded the cruiser Hamidieh, the only large ship then in possession of Turkey, as compensation for the Breslau, the former German cruiser, which was destroyed in the Dardanelles while under the Turkish flag. Despite Turkey's protest the Hamidieh has departed for Sebastopol with the German flag flying.

Not Credited in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The State Department has not received any information to bear out in any way the report from Copenhagen that Turkey has broken relations with Germany. In certain diplomatic quarters the report also lacked confirmation. Officials had nothing to suggest as to the basis for the report, and there was no disposition to credit it in the absence of fuller information.

When Congress assembled in December, 1917, there was agitation in favor of declaring war on Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria. As far as Austria-Hungary was concerned, President Wilson settled the question by recommending that the state of war between that Government and the Government of the United States be declared. Considerable feeling was displayed at the time in favor of including Turkey and Bulgaria in the declaration, but President Wilson and Secretary Lansing urged that the declaration be confined to Austria-Hungary, and Congress followed their advice.

It was never made clear in any official way why the Administration was opposed to having Turkey and Bulgaria made public enemies of the United States, but the understanding was that the President believed that a good chance existed that these two countries would withdraw from their partnership with German and Austria and that by keeping the United States on nominally friendly terms with them there was a chance of using American influence to induce them to quit the Teutonic alliance.

There had been indications that Bulgaria would like to enter into peace parleys in behalf of Germany and Austria with the United States, but these were based mainly on overtures from entirely unauthorized agents, who sought to sound officals of the American Legation in Berne. At any rate, they never progressed far enough for this Government to pay any attention to them officially.

Bulgars Reported Friendly.

One of the reasons advanced for the reputed Bulgarian desire to avoid a conflict with the United States was that many Bulgarians had received their education in this country, and a kindly feeling for America and Americans existed throughout the Bulgarian nation. It was said even that Bulgarian troops had refused to take their places with German troops on the western front because they could not be induced to fight the United States.

The United States Government broke diplomatic relations with the Ottoman Empire, but has not made any recent move toward a declaration of hostilities. Feeling in Congress is divided on the subject, but there is a strong contingent in the Senate and the House in favor of placing the Turkish Government and the Government of Bulgaria in the official enemy class.

Recently it was reported that Turkish troops had sacked the American Consulate at Tabriz, and this Government called on the Porte for an explanation. Turkey responded in a way to indicate

ENEMY FIRES ON WOUNDED

Turns Machine Guns and Rifles on Stretcher Bearers and Bombs Ambulances.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, July 29.—The Germans have crossed the Ourcq. So have the Americans. On a line well north of the stream our troops, with the French on the right and left, this morning are pushing back the Germans toward the Vesle River. The enemy had evidently intended to make a stand on the north side of the Ourcq, but a brilliant charge was made by the Americans, who forced the stream, broke through their positions at half a dozen points, and forced their hurried withdrawal from the bank. The line along the Ourcq from Fère-en-Tardenois to the source of the river is held by American troops.

Fère-en-Tardenois was taken yesterday by the French, with American aid, and on our right the French have reached well north of Passy-Grigny and to the environs of Ville-en-Tardenois, southwest of Rheims. The German withdrawal is going much faster than the high command expected. The retreat was forced so strongly that hundreds of tons of ammunition were left behind yesterday by the fleeing Huns. While the Germans withdraw on a regular line of flight it cannot be rightly called a rout, but the pressure of the Americans yesterday played havoc with the Crown Prince's retreat.

We occupied Seringes-et-Nesles, Sergy, and Ronchères. There is some doubt if any chapter of our fighting reached the thrills of our charge across the Ourcq yesterday. Americans of indomitable spirit met a veritable hell of machine guns, shells, gas, and bombs in a strong position, and broke through with such violence that they made a salient jutting into the enemy line beyond what the schedule called for. One has heard for many years of the fighting qualities of the American unit which led the charge. It has added greatly to its glory. One is not now permitted to name this unit, but the story will get back home, for it cannot die.

Enemy in Strong Positions.

Saturday's withdrawal of the Germans before our never-lessening pressure took them at midnight across the river and into strong hilled positions on the northern bank. There they placed many hundreds of machine guns ranging on the river, and trained their artillery to lay down barrages on the stream. Two fresh Guard divisions were placed in front of the Americans, and the bridges were destroyed behind the fleeing foe. At midnight the enemy thought he had a new line. He had for a few hours. At 4 o'clock a part of the famed fighting unit stepped from the woods on the southern bank, leaped into the stream, which is about two feet deep, and got to the other bank before the Germans were aware of it. But by the time all were over the machine guns cut loose and the barrage swept them mercilessly.

They held twenty minutes and had to come back. But the Germans were all wrong if they thought the Americans were through. At 5:15 another dash was made, and after bloody fighting this, too, was driven back across the stream.

In the meanwhile our engineers brought up two bridges, with every piece of wood cut and fitted beforehand, and threw them across the stream. At 7 o'clock four companies made the dash. To say they stayed across makes a short story of valiant resistance. The Germans put down a barrage behind them along the stream and mowed them down with machine guns from their trees, from behind rocks and from bushes.

While the situation was becoming precarious for these men big plans were executed behind them, and at 8 o'clock the grand rush started. It put thousands of Americans across the river by 10 o'clock. By this time our artillery was locating the Germans, and field guns on the south bank were shooting point blank into the Hun machine gun nests. Our men got set on the northern bank and started for the hills lining the stream. After half an hour of the bitterest sort of fighting we got deep into these positions, and the enemy broke and ran down the northern side of the hills and over a valley to another series of hills near.

Retreat All Along the Line.

By this time Americans were across the river in a dozen places. By noon they had captured Sergy, and two hours later had Seringes. The Germans then began a withdrawal all along the line they had expected to hold. It was the first charge of the Americans which had broken them. The German machine gunners in the trees were killed and the others fled. We brought back a few prisoners. That the Germans intended to stand here is shown by pile after pile of ammunition we found where the guns had been hurriedly pulled out.

Never have the Americans done hotter fighting. Never did they show to better advantage. Never did the Hun fight nastier. It was not the deadly work of the machine guns in the trees and houses, and even in the churches, that awoke the wrath of our men. It was not the terrific barrage that angered them. But when they saw Hun snipers kill their wounded comrades, then they saw red and made the enemy pay.

Getting back our wounded presented many difficulties, because the ambulances had to wait on the south side of the river. Scores of wounded men with slight hurts acted as stretcher bearers for the more seriously wounded fellows. The chaplain stayed in the front lines, directed the work of the stretcher bearers, and himself gave a hand when needed. Some of our slightly wounded who thought themselves equal to the task carried stretchers until they dropped from loss of blood or exhaustion.

Stretcher Bearers Fired On.

Time after time the Germans played machine guns on the stretcher bearers. I saw their wounded, and they told me. One overloaded truck came in with wounded and reported that a German airplane had swept low and dropped a bomb which destroyed an open truck carrying wounded. The driver and two wounded men were killed. Stretcher bearers wading the river with helpless wounded were fired on by German snipers in the hills beyond.

The Hun left nothing undone to make the Americans regret their audacious and gallant charge. He did not succeed. None of our wounded but hope the doctors will mend them quickly, so that they may get back at him for today's performance. The doctors say 90 per cent. of the wounded will get back into the line, because most of their hurts are clean bullet wounds.

Our lines this morning lie some distance to the north of the Ourcq, and the line will hold. There are Americans, and lots of them, back of that line who mean business more than ever before. If the enemy wants to play rough with them he sure will get his fill.

Stories New York Boys Tell.

A number of soldiers of one company who had been in the fight had high praise for Captain John P. Hurley of New York City. They said he was always in front, and early in the fight shed his coat and belt to do more business. Frank Rooney of 557 West 149th Street, New York City, said:

" We reached where we thought we were going, but the Captain said, 'Come on, boys,' and we just kept going. Don't forget to say a good word for the Chaplain. He's a real guy."

Louis Forthals of 354 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn, and Alfred F. Georgie, Jr., of 330 Macon Street, Brooklyn, told a thrilling story of charging machine guns through the enemy barrage. They heard a number of men talking about Burr Finkel, hailing from Port Jervis. It appears that Finkel's officers were all put out, and he took charge of a platoon and captured three machine guns, putting their crews hors de combat. The men seemed to follow him naturally, although he was only a private, and he came through the fight without a scratch. " And," said one of the men, " we called him the boob of our outfit! "

Sergeant Ruben Brown of Alabama said that from the time he started until he stopped he covered ten kilometers. He explained that he didn't mean to go so far, but, advancing uphill, the Germans laid down a rolling barrage behind his outfit. The barrage moved closer, and there was nothing to do but keep ahead of it. So they went on down the hill, pushing the Huns back until they reached a valley, where they were gassed. Then machine guns in a church tower turned loose, but Brown and his men hung on. They captured thirty-five machine guns, and counted thirty the Germans had ruined and left.

Private Jim Brady of 215 Avenue A, Manhattan, was one of the attackers who went across the Ourcq at 4 in the morning. He is wondering yet, he says, how he got through, because snipers were trying to pick

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—" Foch can say he willed something great, that he devised a simple and clear plan, that he made his preparations excellently, and that his scheme was cleverly executed," declares the Frankfurter Zeitung. It qualifies its frankness by saying that he underestimated the German strength and asked his troops, on the whole, to perform the impossible.

Such a qualification rather falls to the ground in the face of the fact of a continued German retreat, but the paper goes on to pay the enemy still further tribute by saying that "never before has the strategy of the western powers been so united and cool-headed as during the last few weeks," and it frankly admires the way in which Foch, while concerned with the German offensive, gathered " at least fifty-two divisions together for an attack, did everything necessary to exercise and place his fighting troops, and then began his offensive at essential points."

The writer thinks Hindenburg will give up still more ground in order to save his men, and concludes: " Everybody feels that in these weeks we are fighting for the success of our whole campaign of attack."

The military critic of the Kreuz-Zeitung appears to despair of the German capacity for an offensive in the near future. " Just as we have," he says, " weakened the enemy by losses by offensive action up to the present, so it will now be our task to do that by means of defensive." On that point the war correspondent of Vorwärts, having pointed out the sources of man power at the disposal of the western powers, says: " It is false to talk of any effective weakening of the fighting power of the French Army."

All that can scarcely be pleasant reading for the Fatherland, so thoroughly schooled of late in the belief that Foch was no master of war as compared with Hindenburg and Ludendorff, that the German commanders had the initiative firmly in their grip and that the Entente reserves had been completely exhausted in the various offensives since March.

BATTLE GROWING IN FURY

BUT ADVANCE CONTINUES

AMERICANS DEFEAT GUARDS

Repulse Picked Prussian and Bavarian Troops, Causing Heavy Losses.

LONDON, July 29.—Against strongly increased resistance by the Germans, the allied troops made more progress today in the Soissons-Rheims salient, but the gains were less marked than those of yesterday and not as general, according to press accounts.

The German retreat is continuing along the whole line, with the Allies in close pursuit. The Germans have succeeded in checking to a certain extent, but not in stopping, the allied advance. They are using more heavy guns than for some days previously.

Unofficial advices say that since yesterday [no hour being stated] the Allies have advanced two to three miles on a twenty-mile front. The enemy has definitely abandoned the line of the Ourcq, and there is little doubt that he will go back beyond the Vesle to a line, thirty-six miles long, between Soissons and Rheims, which is probably well intrenched and has good lines of communication.

The German retirement has been quite orderly and deliberate. Thus far the taking of only four guns has been reported.

Most conspicuous of the operations reported today was the drive of French troops east and northeast from the region of Oulchy-le-Château at the salient in the enemy line resulting from the allied advance to Fère-en-Tardenois and beyond.

In this region Grand Rozoy (two miles northeast of Oulchy) and Cugny (one mile east of Oulchy) were occupied by the French troops, as well as the heights north of the first town. Pétain's men are now moving forward on Hills 206 and 205, further north of Grand Rozoy, which dominates a wide area, north and south. They have captured 450 prisoners by this stroke.

Further east, and just north of the Ourcq, according to unofficial advices, the Allies have gained possession of the villages of Vallée and Givray.

Toward Soissons there has been heavy fighting in the Bazancy region, and the official bulletin of the French War Office tonight reveals the fact that Scottish troops are in line there.

The village of Ruzancy, which had twice before been taken by the allied troops, was again surrounded and occupied. It was retaken by the Germans, but the Scottish troops regained part of it, and were still holding it at last accounts. Two hundred prisoners were taken here.

Villages between Soissons and Bazoches, about fourteen miles east, are on fire, leading to the belief that the Germans may intend a further retreat.

The hardest fighting of the day seems to have taken place in the region east and southeast of Fère-en-Tardenois.

Terrific Combats at Sergy.

The American troops are pressing the Germans very vigorously. They met Germany's finest regiments in battle south of Sergy (southeast of Fère-en-Tardenois) last night, where the enemy threw in the whole 4th Division of Prussian Guards in a desperate counterattack.

Dispatches say that the Americans stood like a stone wall, brought the Germans to a step, and inflicted the heaviest losses upon them.

The dispatches praise the work of the Americans highly and emphasize the losses suffered by the Prussians from American machine gunners.

The fact that the Germans picked the Americans as opponents for the choicest battalions in the German Army indicates that the Germans have learned to respect the men from the United States in the fighting of the last fortnight.

The Germans started a new battle this morning in a quiet sector east of Rheims by launching a heavy attack against French positions on Hill 181, near Monte,-sans-Nom. There has been no decisive result from the struggle.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, July 29, (Associated Press.)—A decidedly sharp attack delivered by the Allies at dawn today north of the Ourcq River made another deep dent in the German line. Many prisoners were taken.

As far as reported up to the present, the front was pushed forward to the wood lying about 1,500 yards north of the village of Grand Rozoy, which also was taken.

The heights north of Grand Rozoy are now in allied hands, and the advancing troops are approaching the dominating hills numbered 205 and 208, which in the distance overlook Fismes, where the Germans have large concentrations of stores.

Further to the east the allied troops have crossed the Ourcq at several places, and taken Corbeny Farm, southwest of Saponay.

OURCQ WON BY AMERICANS

off the Americans crossing the river.

Richard Kelly of Tarrytown said he had the same experience as Brady.

The sentiment of all these lads is a simple prayer to get back at the boche again. Because of the great use of machine guns by the enemy in rearguard actions, the doughboys declare that the Germans are fighting the war with machine guns, and that, except for snipers, they have run into no rifle fire.

Fight Machine Guns with 75's.

Incidentally the Americans have been successful the last two days with a new method of meeting machine guns. This consists of infantry taking along and scattering field cannon—75's. When a machine gun nest is located, one of these incomparable little guns is fired at it pointblank, as one would a rifle. One shell is more than enough for any machine gun nest. One gunner swears he can shoot German machine gunners out of trees with his 75, which is about a three-inch gun.

What the German will do during the next three days one can only wait and see. He has his best troops in front of the Americans, but is being driven back from day to day. After yesterday's advance the American aviators reported heavy movements northward between the Ourcq and Vesle Rivers. A train of German troop cars was seen wrecked in the yards north of Fère-en-Tardenois, where an American shell had blown it to wreckage and torn up the track. Because of the mud, much trouble with the German transport is reported.

For the first time our troops yesterday took possession of large stores of ammunition. Before that the enemy cleaned up fairly well. Large stores of material were also left on the south bank of the Ourcq.

The next natural line of defense for the Germans is the Vesle River line, practically straight from Soissons to Rheims. Back of that is the Aisne line. Certainly the Germans must make a stand on one line or the other.

The German communiqué today mentions new positions without giving any details of being driven back over the Ourcq, as they were across the Marne one week ago yesterday. Incidentally, America's war effort is having a greater effect than the mere military advance. That its eventual effect upon the population of Germany is feared is shown by the fact that, although a large part of the line from which the foe is retreating is held by the Americans, our nationality is conspicuous by absence of its mention in the German communiqué.

NEW YORKERS IN OURCQ DASH.

The names in Edwin L. James's cable dispatch indicate that Company K, 165th Regiment, (the old 69th of the New York National Guard,) was among the first detachments to cross the Ourcq River. Captain John P. Hurley, who heads Company K, and is referred to in the cablegram, lives at 119 Amersfort Place, this city.

Dispatches received in New York yesterday show that Lieutenant Patrick Dowling, 170 West Ninety-eighth Street, was also one of the first to cross the river. According to these accounts, young Dowling said he just waded through, shook the water off, and went for an enemy machine gun detachment. He had with him Corporal James McGovern, 3,619 Tehama Street, Brooklyn, and Private Thomas Lyden, 344 Seventy-ninth Street, Brooklyn, all of Company K. The trio routed out a machine gun nest and made easier the crossing of hundreds of other Americans.

Lieut. Dowling lives with his brother. The family were delighted over the news, but they remembered the Lieutenant's injunction against "hero stories." It seemed that in March Lieut. Dowling was wounded and his friends told true stories of his bravery. These reached the officer in France and displeased him. There were many who remembered the Lieutenant, however, and had stories to tell of his arrival here when 16 years old as a stowaway. They recalled also that self-taught he had entered the regular army and had served three years, seeing service in the Philippines, in Mexico, and in Cuba.

His work attracted the attention of General Pershing. When with the Fifth Infantry he was recommended for a commission. He received his officer's training at Plattsburg. He was commissioned a Second Lieutenant and assigned to Camp Mills. Just before he sailed for France he was promoted to First Lieutenant.

Jim Brady of 215 Avenue A, who is mentioned in Mr. James's cable dispatch, is 22 years old, and is one of those youths who would rather "fight than eat." He is the son of Andrew Brady, night watchman in a department store. Brady has served long in the old Sixty-ninth, and with that command he saw service on the Texas border.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 28, (Midnight.)—I spent all day on the Marne battlefield in the region of Dormans and the villages across the Marne which the Germans were still occupying yesterday morning.

It was a vision of war in all its horrors.

Already in a four-mile belt south of the river houses were shattered, roads shell-pocked, and woods torn as if by lightning. In wide patches trees and brushwood stood brown and lifeless, blasted by poison gas. The roadside was littered with German ammunition cases and an occasional fire-twisted skeleton of an automobile truck.

More than one blackened crater, its lip still strewn with live shells, showed where a German munition dump had exploded.

Nor did it need the French wagons, laden with plain white pinewood crosses that mark soldiers' graves, to tell what else lay hid in the trampled cornfields and devastated woods. The taint of pestilence hung heavy upon the air, and carrion crows flapped sluggishly across the intervals of forest.

But all one had seen before seemed trivial beside Dormans and the Marne Valley. It is a typical country town straggling along at the foot of a steep hill closely parallel with the river, from which it is separated by the railroad.

Eastward stretches an alluvial plain, two miles wide, narrowing to half a mile opposite the town itself and surmounted on the north by a gradually rising hill, the crest of which bears the southern fringe of the Riza forest.

There had been little attempt by either side to cross the river in the open country to the eastward. It was on the Dormans waterfront that the German bridges were most numerous after the enemy's bombardment had momentarily paralyzed the defense on the slopes above.

Here, too, the French had first crossed on a footbridge, hurriedly constructed from German material, when a week's heroic resistance had forced the Kaiser's best troops to swift retreat.

With affectionate pride a French General told me how his chasseurs had withstood the shock of Prince Eitel's guards and a crack Saxon division as he traced on the map the battle against double odds from day to day.

"By noon on Monday," he said, "we had recovered from the shock of the bombardment. From that hour onward the boches paid for every foot of ground in blood. You will see for yourself what the Marne passage cost them."

I walked along the bank of the river, which is here not more than forty-five yards wide. In a quarter mile I counted the débris of seven German bridges, three mere footrails, one of which was repaired by the French, two strong enough for light carts, minenwerfer or machine guns, and two solidly constructed on pontoons with graded approaches cut from the bank on either side.

CLEMENCEAU UNDER FIRE.

Visits the Ruined City of Dormans While Shells Are Still Falling.

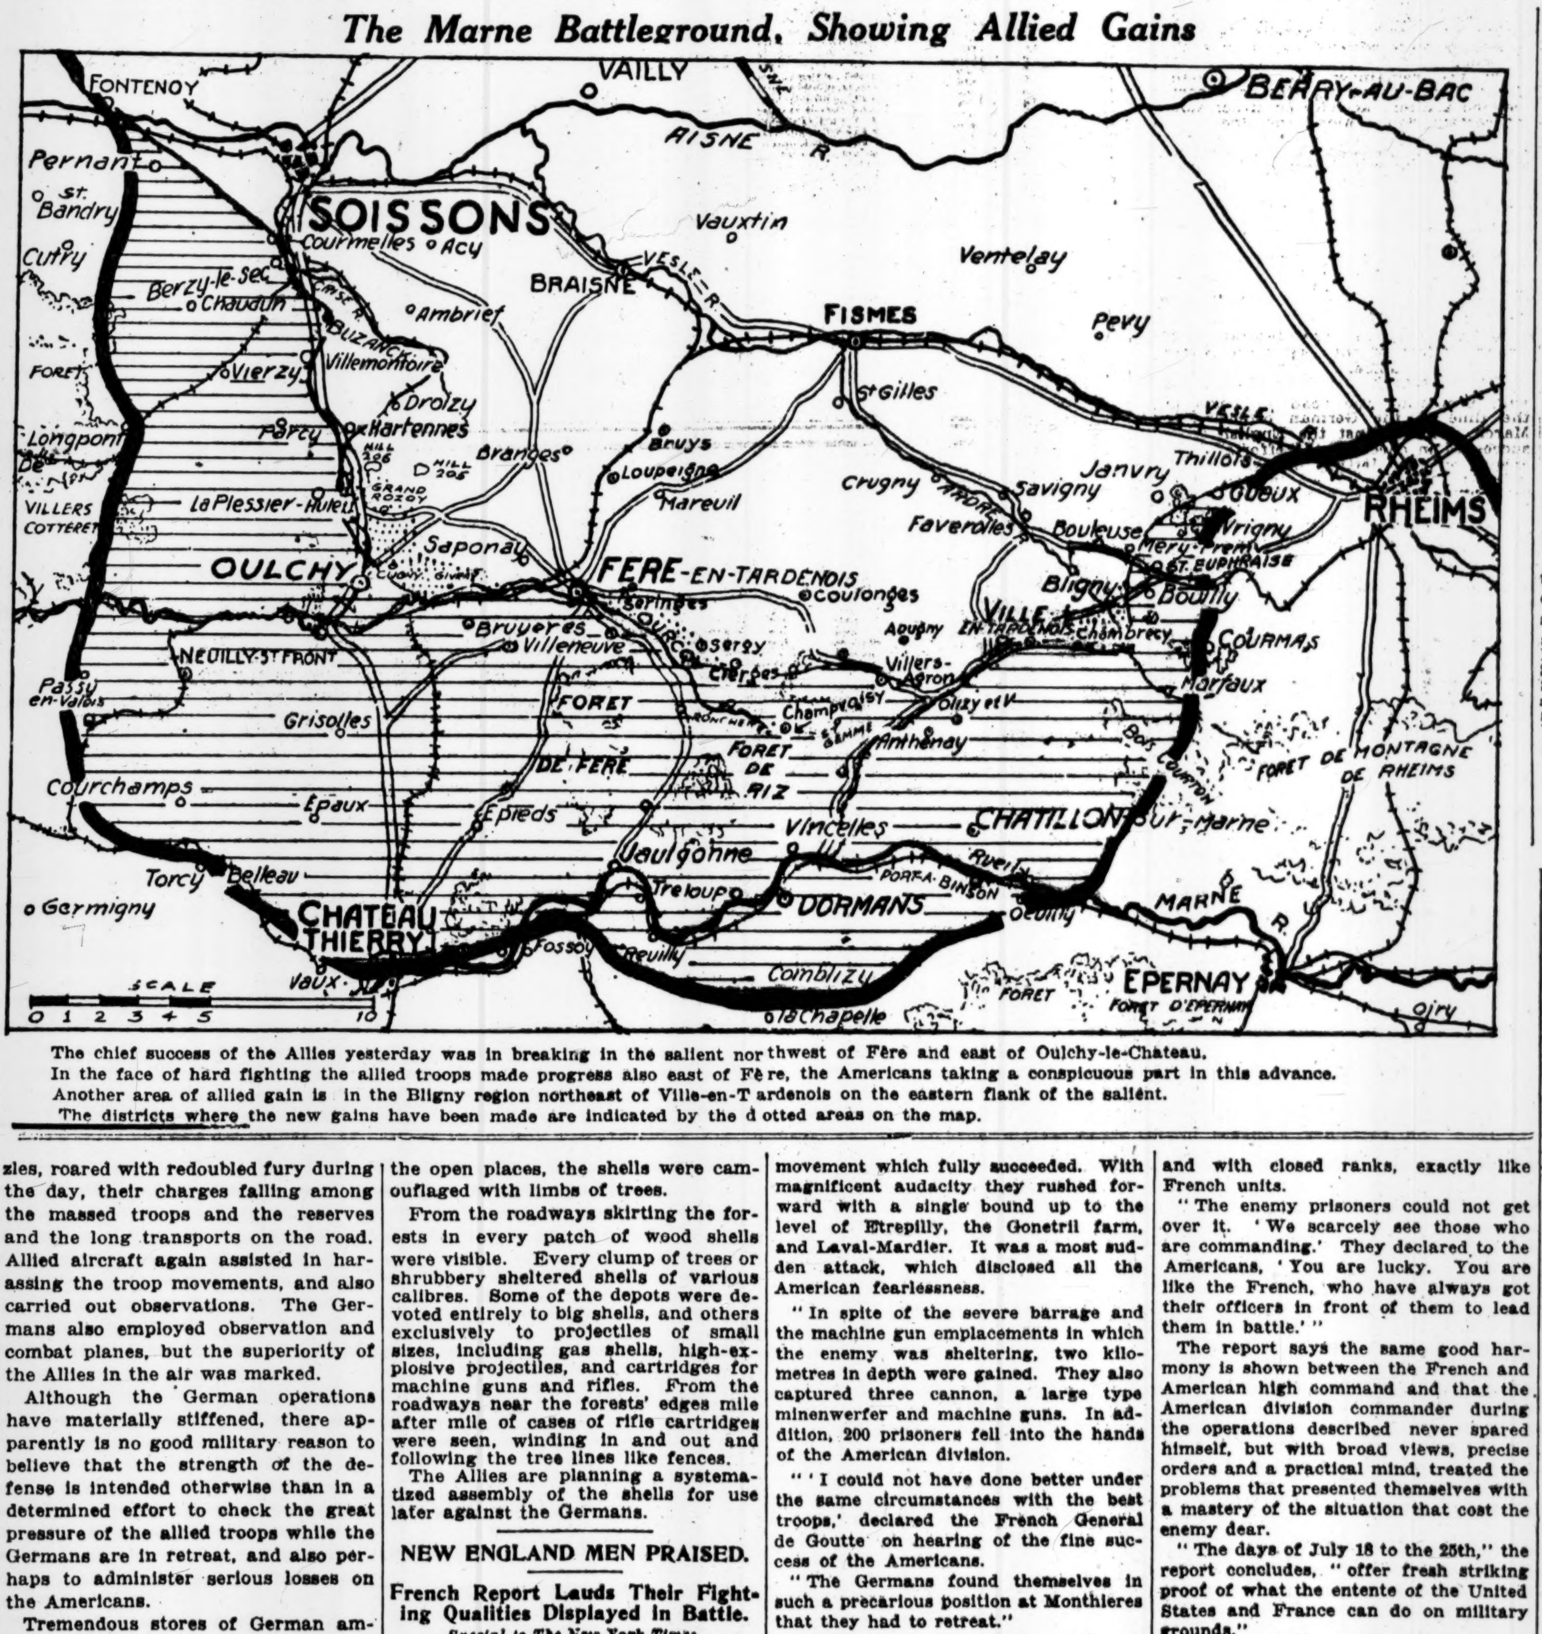
WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 29.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent saw Premier Clemenceau at Dormans yesterday morning. Despite the fact that shells were falling on the town from time to time, the Premier visited the main street, which was still strewn with dead bodies and horses, and where not a single house was undamaged.

Subsequently he examined the château on the outskirts belonging to Senator Valle, whom Clemenceau often visited before the war. The left wing of the château is shattered and most of the windows are smashed, but otherwise the house is intact. A dead horse lay in the courtyard, which was also littered by ammunition for a machine gun post.

The house had been the headquarters of the Kaiser's son, Eitel Fritz, commanding the 1st Division Guard. Surprised by the rapidity of the French advance, Attila's namesake left too hurriedly to pillage anything of value save clocks, which, as the Premier remarked to the French General conducting him, "The Germans never overlook, especially now when they are fighting time as well as the Allies."

Clemenceau wore a dark sack suit and a slouch hat, in striking contrast to the uniforms and helmets around him. He congratulated the officers on the work of themselves and their men in a loud, firm voice, and expressed to the General confident satisfaction with the battle situation.

The Marne Battleground, Showing Allied Gains



The chief success of the Allies yesterday was in breaking in the salient northwest of Fère and east of Oulchy-le-Chateau. In the face of hard fighting the allied troops made progress also east of Fère, the Americans taking a conspicuous part in this advance. Another area of allied gain is in the Bligny region northeast of Ville-en-Tardenois on the eastern flank of the salient. The districts where the new gains have been made are indicated by the dotted areas on the map.

AMERICANS DEFEAT PRUSSIAN GUARDS

Also Beat Off Bavarian Division Hurled Against Them as Desperate Measure.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 29, (Associated Press.)—The American troops tonight still held the apex of their advance, won after a struggle with the Germans in which the opposing lines moved forward and backward time and again, Sergy, on the north bank of the Ourcq, changing hands six times.

The Crown Prince of Germany and his Generals paid the Americans a great compliment in bringing up against them two of their best divisions, the 4th Guards and Bavarians. They had been held in reserve, presumably for the operation. They had been delayed, and reached the army north of the Marne on Saturday night. They moved through the retreating main body yesterday, and came into the action early today. They did not replace any of the German troops already in the line, but served as reinforcements.

The first efforts of the guards and Bavarians were partly successful and the Americans were forced to withdraw from Sergy and a few other positions, including Seringes-et-Nesles. But the Germans could not force the main body across the river. The stream is narrow and shallow, and some detachments of Americans at times were driven back, but always there remained enough Americans on the north bank to check the German rushes, and in every instance the Americans returned to the fray with great spirit.

It was a veteran American division, and today's opposition to the terrific onslaught made against it justified the confidence of the staff that it was more than equal to anything that the Crown Prince had to offer.

The Germans were not content with the stubborn resistance which has characterized their fighting so much lately. Artillery supplemented the machine guns and infantry, and the trained guard and Bavarians began their work in a manner reflecting their confidence.

In the repeated changes in position both sides employed all the tactics of modern warfare. After artillery preparation direct advances sometimes were made; at other times enveloping movements were tried.

With the Americans there operated a few light French armored motor cars which did brilliant work in rushing the line, at times their guns replying point-blank to those of the Germans.

Fought Hand to Hand.

Scores of times the khaki and gray clad men met in the streets of the little towns and on the slopes of the river banks in hand-to-hand encounters. The bayonet was used, but the Americans effectively used their pistols as well.

There was much fighting actually in the water, where the Germans attempted to rush their antagonists to the south bank of the stream. There were times when the blood-tinted and muddied stream gave evidence of the violence of the conflict. There were many deaths as a result of the slightly wounded men being drowned.

It was late this afternoon when Sergy for the sixth time was in the possession of the Americans. At the same time it was reported that every other position held by the Americans Sunday night had been retaken. The German losses were heavy.

From other parts of the long line from Soissons to Rheims come reports of the allied lines everywhere holding and at some points advancing. On the American right brilliant cavalry support of the Frenchmen has contributed materially to the American success.

The heavy guns of the Allies, ignoring to a great extent the engagements in progress almost under their muzzles, roared with redoubled fury during the day, their charges falling among the massed troops and the reserves and the long transports on the road. Allied aircraft again assisted in harassing the troop movements, and also carried out observations. The Germans also employed observation and combat planes, but the superiority of the Allies in the air was marked.

Although the German operations have materially stiffened, there apparently is no good military reason to believe that the strength of the defense is intended otherwise than in a determined effort to check the great pressure of the allied troops while the Germans are in retreat, and also perhaps to administer serious losses on the Americans.

Tremendous stores of German ammunition found by the French-American troops in the forests of Fère and Riz lead officers to believe that the allied offensive nipped in the bud German plans for a momentous drive upon Epernay.

The forests and the surrounding country north of the Marne were virtually one great arsenal for German ammunition of all kinds, big gun shells being particularly numerous. At places on the edges of the woods there were large shells stacked like cordwood over large areas.

Thousands of these shells were intended for the 210-millimeter guns, only a few of which have been captured. The Americans assume that the Germans withdrew many of these guns, and that others intended for the great drive had not yet arrived when the allied offensive began.

All through the forests the Americans came upon ammunition depots, more than an acre of ground being covered at some places with shells of all calibres. Some of the smaller shells were labeled "For immediate use." Along the roads, and even in the open places, the shells were camouflaged with limbs of trees.

From the roadways skirting the forests in every patch of wood shells were visible. Every clump of trees or shrubbery sheltered shells of various calibres. Some of the depots were devoted entirely to big shells, and others exclusively to projectiles of small sizes, including gas shells, high-explosive projectiles, and cartridges for machine guns and rifles. From the roadways near the forests' edges mile after mile of cases of rifle cartridges were seen, winding in and out and following the tree lines like fences.

NEW ENGLAND MEN PRAISED.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—High praise for the fighting qualities and services of an American army division, probably the 26th National Guard Division, from New England, commanded by Major Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, is contained in an official French cablegram received this afternoon. The 26th Division is a part of the First Army Corps, in which are included the 1st and 2d Divisions of regulars, the 42d, 41st, and 32d Divisions, who have been engaged in the fighting in the Soissons-Marne salient. The French official dispatch follows:

"An official report from the first commandant gives detailed information about the part played from the 18th to the 25th of July by an American division composed for the greater part of recruits from Boston, Mass. The following are some particularly interesting passages of the long report, which first of all testifies that the ardor of these soldiers was so great that it was necessary to restrain them at times.

"On the 20th of July, in order to free Monthieres and the Petret Woods, still strongly occupied by the Germans, severe combats were delivered by the French troops on the left. In order to relieve them the Americans on the evening of the 20th delivered a flanking movement which fully succeeded. With magnificent audacity they rushed forward with a single bound up to the level of Etrepilly, the Gonetril farm, and Laval-Mardier. It was a most sudden attack, which disclosed all the American fearlessness.

"In spite of the severe barrage and the machine gun emplacements in which the enemy was sheltering, two kilometres in depth were gained. They also captured three cannon, a large type minenwerfer and machine guns. In addition, 200 prisoners fell into the hands of the American division.

"'I could not have done better under the same circumstances with the best troops,' declared the French General de Goutte on hearing of the fine success of the Americans.

After having detailed the action of this division during the days of the 21st and the 22d of July, the report continues as follows, how on the 22d of July it took the wood of Trugny, north of Epieds:

"The Germans fiercely opposed this attempt, and counterattacked with great energy, but they learned to their cost the meaning of American tenacity. Impeded at first in their manoeuvre, the Americans took the outskirts of the wood on the 24th, went straight into it, and seized a whole company of German prisoners and continued their advance with such fury that toward 3 P. M. they had reached the outskirts of the forest of Fère, and the same evening they had gained the Fère-en-Tardenois to Jaulgonne Road.

"Thus the American division had in six days realized at certain points a gain of territory of 7.7 kilometers, (about 4¾ miles,) in depth, fighting day and night without respite, and giving proof of the finest military virtues. All their communications were carried out with perfect regularity on the right and left, as well as in the interior of the division itself. Discipline which filled the Germans with surprise and admiration animated the attacking sections. They marched with officers at the side and with closed ranks, exactly like French units.

"The enemy prisoners could not get over it. 'We scarcely see those who are commanding.' They declared to the Americans, 'You are lucky. You are like the French, who have always got their officers in front of them to lead them in battle.'"

The report says the same good harmony is shown between the French and American high command and that the American division commander during the operations described never spared himself, but with broad views, precise orders and a practical mind, treated the problems that presented themselves with a mastery of the situation that cost the enemy dear.

"The days of July 18 to the 25th," the report concludes, "offer fresh striking proof of what the entente of the United States and France can do on military grounds."

PERSHING TELLS OF PURSUIT.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The crossing of the Ourcq by American forces in their pursuit of the enemy was reported in General Pershing's communiqué for yesterday, received today at the War Department. This reads:

"Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces, July 28, 1918.

"Section A.—North of the Marne our troops continue the pursuit of the enemy. In spite of his determined efforts to delay their progress by rearguard actions, they have crossed the Ourcq and have taken the towns of Seringes-et-Nesles, Sergy, and Roncheres.

NEW BASE FOR SUPERGUN.

Second Emplacement Said to Have Been Found Near Nanteuil.

PARIS, July 29, (Havas Agency.)—French and American troops have discovered a second emplacement for a German super-cannon at Nanteuil-Notre Dame, according to The Herald.

The emplacement was five meters deep and fourteen meters square.

WILL GO BEYOND THE VESLE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—According to the latest information received in London the Germans have definitely abandoned the line of the Ourcq, and there is very little doubt that they mean to go back beyond the Vesle. It is pointed out that the new Soissons-Rheims line would be a very good one since it is short compared with the line the Germans are holding in the salient and would give them a front of about thirty miles.

The line west of Rheims at 10 o'clock this morning was to St. Euphraise, west of Bouilly Vricny, the southern outskirts of Chambrecy, the southern outskirt of Villeen-en-Tardenois, between Berthenay and Villersagron, south to Ste. Gemme, La Brillerii, Roncheres Sergy, Meuroy Farm, where the French are a mile north of the Ourcq to the station at Fèren-en-Tardenois, Givray, Vallée, Grand Rozoy to a hill 1,500 meters north, then without change as before northeast of Le Plessier Hulem.

Near Sergy there has been considerable activity. After being four times taken and lost, it is now finally in the hands of the French.

Dutch Observer Tells of Our "Gigantic Force"

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—Returning here from a visit to France a correspondent of the Handelsblad writes a long article of enthusiastic admiration for American achievements and concludes:

"From America issues a force against which no European nation can stand. It is a gigantic force which is developing calmly and scientifically.

"The German people are told that the U-boats will be able to conjure the American danger, but the German people have not seen what I have seen."

JAPAN CONGRATULATES US.

Italy, Too, Sends Felicitations on Victory of Our Forces in France.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Mesages of congratulation on the success of the American forces fighting on the Soissons-Rheims front were received today at the State Department from the Japanese and Italian Governments through Ambassadors Ishii and De Celliere.

The Japanese note said:

The Itailian message reads:

"The important and glorious successes that the American forces have won in the recent battle fought on the French front have produced in Italy, together with a keen feeling of admiration joy which can only be measured by him who knows, as your Excellency knows, the deep friendship that the Italian nation unreservedly has attained for this great Republic.

"For these successes that the valor and the faith of the American soldier will renew on the common fields of battle, the Government of the King has intrusted to me the very gratifying task of expressing to the Government of the United States its warmest congratulations."

BAKER SAYS WE MUST REDOUBLE OUR EFFORTS

Asserts Victory Is Cause for Rejoicing, but Would Not Justify Any Relaxation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Secretary of War Baker asserted late this afternoon that the meaning of the success won by the American and allied forces in the great battle in the Soissons-Rheims salient is that every effort must be redoubled in our endeavor to win the war.

"The progress of the allied armies in the Soissons-Rheims salient is continuing," said Secretary Baker. "Substantial gains were made on both Saturday and Sunday. It is fortunate that our people are accepting this success with a true measure of its significance. It is, of course, a cause for congratulation and rejoicing, but would by no means justify any relaxation of our efforts. It means that we must redouble our efforts."

ALLIES HOLD GAINS UNDER FIERCE FIRE

BITTER FIGHT IN FERE

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 29, (Associated Pess.)—The allied foces pushed on beyond Fère-en-Tardenois this morning and maintained their positions everywhere in the face of strong German counterattacks.

There was very severe hand-to-hand fighting in the streets of Fère-en-Tardenois yesterday, but the Allies eventually obtained the upper hand.

After conquering this town, the Allies next had before them the difficult task of crossing the River Ourcq in the face of the strongest German fire. Happily the river is running low just now, for not a bridge was left intact. The Allies succeeded in overcoming all obstacles and won a foothold on the northern bank.

An extremely violent artillery duel was in progress this morning north of the Ourcq as far as Soissons. In the sector south of the Ourcq the guns also were busy.

The eastern wing of the front was comparatively quiet early today exceptfor artillery fire. During last night and this morning the Germans launched thousands of shells into the valleys of the Marne and the Ardre.

Near Romigny and Bligny the Allies got over the Dormans-Rheims main road last night.

The advance here called for the greatest precautions because of the huge number of enemy machine guns under cover of the small woods in this region. Further east the Allies are beyond the wooded country and on the plateau.

Fighting is still in progress for the mastery of Ville-en-Tardenois, but the Allies are gradually gaining the ascendency here. They are established in the southern portion of the town, having beaten off all efforts of the Germans to dislodge them.

In taking Cohette Wood, further south, the Allies captured two field guns, two six-inch cannon, and much ammunition.

Near the centre of the allied line in the region north of the Riz Forest there were some furious combats, which lasted several hours and resulted in the Allies gaining possession of Champvoisy. Then Roncheres was reached by advanced guards. Cavalry patrols came into action in the Meunière Wood and at Villers-Agron-Aiguizy.

HOLDS DESPERATELY TO PIVOTS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 29.—The brevity of the afternoon communiqué must not be understood as indicating that the German retreat is slowing down, or that the enemy has been able to re-establish his line of defense between Soissons and Rheims.

Every yard of road north of the Ourcq and the only railway, which is that running from Fère-en-Tardenois to Bazoches, is under heavy fire from the allied guns, but the enemy is still making strong efforts to extricate his troops from the trap in which Foch caught them.

The problem before the allied commanders consists in devising means to bring about a reduction of the two pivots of the German defensive line formed by the positions he helds south of Soissons and south of Rheims. So long as the Germans can succeed in holding these positions, they can prevent the retreat being transformed into a disaster.

By far the more important of the two pivots is that formed by the triangle of country lying between the road from Soissons to Oulchy and the Aisne, which the Germans are defending with desperate energy. They evidently regard the maintenance of this bastion as vital to the ultimate security of their troops still painfully withdrawing from the depths of the salient.

Fresh troops are being constantly thrown into battle in this sector against the troops of General Mangin. The continued advance of Degoutte's army northward from the Aidre, however, indicates the possibility of the creation of a new allied pocket between the Ourcq and the Vesle. Degoutte's advance further appears likely to turn the triangular bastion, the whole western side of which is so closely besieged by Mangin. The situation here is one which may soon become interesting.

FINED FOR LEAK TO BERLIN.

Sir Joseph Jonas and C. A. Vernon Found Guilty in London.

LONDON, July 29.—Sir Joseph Jonas, former Lor Mayor of Sheffield, was fined £2,000, and Charles Alfred Vernon, a former employe in the Ministry of Munitions, was fined £1,000, with costs, in the Old Bailey Court today in connection with charges that they had conspired to violate the Official Secrets act by obtaining and communicating information that might be useful to the enemy.

The jury which heard the evidence in the case found that they were not guilty of a felony, but had committed a misdemeanor. Carl Hahn, another defendant in the case, was acquitted.

The charges against the three men were based on information given to Germany in 1913 relative to the intention of a British firm to manufacture rifles.

Retired for Soissons Failure.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The German General, von Francois, has been put on the retired list as punishment for his failure in the offensive in the region of Soissons, according to an article in the Frankfurter Zeitung reported today by cable.

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

French

PARIS, July 29.

Night Report — The day was marked by very violent engagements along the whole front north of the Marne. The enemy, whose resistance was powerfully increased, disputed ground with us foot by foot and attempted to force us back by numerous counterattacks. Our troops repulsed all assaults and made new progress.

On the outskirts of the village of Buzancy Scottish troops captured the park and château and maintained their positions despite the repeated efforts of the Germans.

East of Plessier Huleu and Oulchy-le-Château we advanced beyond the Château-Thierry Road and captured Grand Rozoy and Cugny. We occupied in the course of a brilliant action the Butte Chalmont. Four hundred and fifty prisoners remained in our hands.

On the right bank of the Ourcq River we extended our gains north of Fère-en-Tardenois and penetrated into Sergy. Further south Roncheres fell into our power.

We gained ground west of Bligny and St. Euphraise.

In Champagne a German attack in the region of Mont Sans Nom was without result.

Day Report—North of the Marne there was no change in the situation during the night.

German

BERLIN, July 29, (via London.)

Night Report — Severe attacks against our new positions west of Fère-en-Tardenois failed, with sanguinary losses for the enemy.

Day Report — Partial attacks launched by the British north of the Lys were repulsed.

Partial attacks in the afternoon (Sunday) by the enemy north of Villemontoire, which were preceded by violent artillery duels, were repulsed by counterattacks.

On the night of the 26th-27th, according to plans, we evacuated our front fighting zone between the Ourcq and the Ardre to a certain extent and shifted our defense to the region between Fère-en-Tardenois and Ville-en-Tardenois. Our movements remained unknown to the enemy. On the 27th the enemy's artillery fire was still directed on our old line. Rearguards prevented his troops, who not until the afternoon felt their way forward hesitatingly, from occupying without fighting the territory given up by us.

Yesterday the enemy's infantry, under strong artillery protection, endeavored to work its way up to our new positions. Weak detachments, which had been left in the forefield, received the enemy at close quarters and inflicted considerable losses on him. The German artillery, which had been in position since the previous day, and battleplanes found good targets in the enemy's advancing columns and tanks.

Our forefield guard, after fulfilling their tasks, fell back to their lines in accordance with orders before strong attacks by the enemy. At and southeast of Fère-en-Tardenois the enemy's attacks several times were renewed and led to violent combats, which ended in the repulse of the enemy.

In this fighting Prussian regiments under General Rachelin, which already had distinguished themselves on the heights of Château-Thierry and since the beginning of the battle almost daily had frustrated assaults by French and American divisions, again especially distinguishing themselves yesterday.

EXPLAINS TO GERMAN PEOPLE

Berlin Issues Pamphlet Discussing "Favorable Tactical" Move.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—In what is considered in allied circles here an attempt to sweeten the bitter pill of the German people, the Berlin Government is circulating a pamphlet dealing with the "shortening of the German front," written by a former German General Staff officer.

"The only principle to bo followed in all measures is to inflict the heaviest possible losses on the enemy and keep our own as low as possible. If this result is achieved we shall approach even nearer the final aim of our operations. A favorable tactical basis must be created. However, this is being attained by the present shortening of our front. It will cause our opponent to continue his attacks by the employment of fresh forces, because only thus can he extract success from the ground in this section which he has occupied without fighting.

"If he did not do this it would be an open admission of the failure of his offensive. We await the enemy there in a much more favorable position and with strengthened troops, improved, near communications, and shortened flanks, which make the enemy's flanking movement more difficult. Our opponent's attack again probably will be beaten off. The enemy's losses in frontal attacks will still be greater, while ours will remain normal.

"It does not matter whether we carry on the struggle offensively or defensively or stand on this or that sector. The shortening of the Marne front extends over such a narrow strip and the withdrawal relates to such a small part of it that it represents a purely tactical movement for the purpose of creating favorable fighting conditions. It has only local significance. The strategical position as a whole is not in the least affected; it has hitherto developed as the German command intended and is being developed further also according to plans.

"Our command retains complete freedom of operation, and by shortening its front it avoided allowing itself to be pinned down under locally unfavorable conditions to any definite sector."

GERMANY TO SEIZE CLOTHES

Voluntary Surrender a Failure—Fine and Prison for Refusal.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—The German Government has issued "final notice" to the public that each person must give up "voluntarily" at least one suit of clothes to the war workers and the army. Failure to meet the demand will result in forcible requisition. Delinquents will be liable to imprisonment for one year and a fine not exceeding 10,000 marks.

With few exceptions, none of the German communities has yielded its assessment of worn clothes to make up the aggregate of the 1,000,000 suits required. Greater Berlin has contributed only 34,994 of the 75,000 suits demanded.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 29.—News has just come in of an early morning assault by Australians upon the enemy lines astride the Bray to Corbie Road, on the tongue of land between the Ancre and the Somme, near the junction of these rivers.

The attack was carried out half an hour after midnight, and two lines of trenches were captured between the villages of Morlancourt and Sailly-Laurette on a frontage of 4,000 yards to a depth of some 500 yards.

Up to 4 o'clock this morning the captures reported numbered two officers and ninety men and five machine guns.

The Australian casualties were slight.

The movement is important as one of a series by which the Australian commander has been gradually pushing back the German lines on the Somme and so removing the danger of a further advance against Amiens.

LONDON, July 29.—Tonight's War Office bulletin says:

In the successful minor operations carried out by us last night in the Morlancourt sector we captured 143 prisoners and 36 machine guns. All our objectives were taken and three counterattacks were beaten off with loss to the enemy.

The day report was as follows:

Australian troops carried out a successful local operation last night in the Morlancourt sector. Two lines of hostile trenches on a front of over two miles astride the Bray-Corbie road were attacked and, together with over 100 prisoners and a number of machine guns, were captured. Heavy casualties were inflicted upon the enemy in this operation. Our losses are reported to be light.

Two successful raids were carried out last night by Canadian troops south and north of Gavrelle. A few prisoners were secured by us on each occasion.

On the remainder of the British front there is nothing else to report beyond artillery activity on either side at certain points along the line.

SHIP BLOWN UP OFF BRAZIL.

RIO JANIERO, Sunday, July 28.—The Italian steamer Giuseppe Garibaldi, 4,000 tons, has been destroyed by an explosion 200 miles off the Brazilian coast. Six members of the crew were killed by the explosion and the remainder were rescued by the English ship Ardgrange.

The officers of the vessel have reported to the Italian Consul here to the effect that the explosion was caused by a dynamite bomb, which is believed to have been placed on board the ship by Germans.

The Giuseppe Garibaldi was formerly the steamer Cleveland Range. She was built in 1898 and was 340 feet long and 15 feet beam. She was owned in Genoa, Italy.

Financial independence for his daughter whether she marries or does not

A FEW years ago one of this city's men of wealth came to our trust department to put aside in a "voluntary" trust an amount of property, for the benefit of his young daughter.

"If she marries, I want her to have an income of her own, and if she does not marry, I want to know that her support will always be certain," said the father.

If you wish information about making a trust, either in favor of a dependent or for yourself, call or write for a memorandum booklet—"The Voluntary Trust."

When it is filled out, our officers will be glad to tell you, either by personal conference or by letter, the advantages to you of such an arrangement.

ICE DANGER

Here is a machine that makes all the "cold" you need. No ice to handle—no ice bills to pay

RIGHT in your own Store or Shop, you can maintain any desired "coldness" without buying ice. Automatic refrigeration "makes cold" just as a heating system "makes heat." It costs little to install and little to keep.

PEERLESS
AUTOMATIC
REFRIGERATION
For any refrigerator that uses 1,000 pounds of ice or more per day

The temperature in a refrigerator, filled with commercial ice, varies much more rapidly than where mechanical refrigeration is used. The ice is usually kept in a separate chamber from the produce, and the latter is chilled by the circulation of cold air. Each time that the doors in the refrigerator are opened, a certain amount of warm air gets in and raises the temperature of the interior above the point desired.

But Peerless Automatic Refrigeration produces and maintains an even, dry, cold temperature in coils of pipe, which keeps the refrigerator thoroughly chilled. Any warm air that may come in through the refrigerator doors will not disturb the uniform coldness of the interior, because enough extra coldness is automatically produced to offset the warm air instantly.

Peerless Automatic Refrigeration has many points of superiority over ordinary refrigerating systems, which you will best appreciate after the Peerless System has served you for six months or a year.

It will pay for itself within a short time after it has been put in—in ice-bill savings. After that it pays dividends.

You take no chances in buying a Peerless, because we take none in selling it

As a matter of self-protection in selling, we supervise all installations and see to it that the machine gives satisfaction.

The machine is broadly guaranteed, but in addition to that we look after our customers as a matter of policy, to see that nothing but satisfaction can ever be talked about in connection with a Peerless Refrigeration System.

VAST GERMAN PLANS ARE UPSET BY FOCH

Hindenburg's Campaign, Prepared Two Years Ago, Had Moved Smoothly Up to Now.

FIRST RETREAT EXPLAINED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 29.—The more the German retreat and all its attendant circumstances are studied here the more apparent becomes to French opinion the extent of the disaster which has befallen the German armies. Foch's blow on the enemy's exposed right flank between Soissons and the Marne, it is now clear, not only brought about the immediate defeat of the enemy which we are now witnessing, but also brought to naught the whole grandiose and hitherto successful German plans which have been in the course of development for over two years.

These plans were laid on a colossal scale, and can only be appreciated if we detach ourselves for the moment from the immediate events and look at the last year of war more or less from a philosophical point of view.

The German plans, which have just been shattered, undoubtedly began to be put into operation with Hindenburg's great strategic retreat of two years ago. At that juncture the Germans found themselves at a standstill in the west faced with an enormous and well-equipped British army. That army, supported as it was by the French, threatened at that time, if no other events intervened, to attack the whole German front facing it between the North Sea and the British junction with the French armies.

But the Germans, even better than we, realized that in a straight fight on that front, as things then were, there was every possibility of a crushing British victory. It was in the face of such a possibility that Hindenburg drew up the great plan which the Germans have been putting into force ever since.

The first stage in the operation of this plan was his great strategic retreat across a wide belt of country to the exceptionally strong defensive positions in the rear. This retreat, it may now be admitted, completely upset the allied plans for a general offensive, which had been maturing for many months.

It was impossible for the Allies on their new front with such a broad belt of devastated country all around them, and with no railways, roads, water supply, timber, &c., to be in position to take the offensive afresh without many months of preparation.

By a species of gigantic jiujitsu tricks Hindenburg succeeded in delaying the Allies, and we need not begrudge him the tribute that his strategic idea had in it some of the elements of genius his countrymen claimed for it.

But delaying the Allies was a mere secondary, although the more immediately pressing feature of the plan. The Germans realized keenly that, heavily involved as they were on the whole eastern front, they must dispose of Russia and, if possible, Italy as well, before they could think of seriously tackling the British and French on the west.

With the two eliminated, Germany would be free to throw all her forces on the western front, first against France and then against the British, before the Americans would have time to come in.

Hindenburg's retreat two years ago, which puzzled many people and led to so much controversy, had all these factors for a foundation. Up till a fortnight ago this plan had been carried out practically in its entirety. Russia has been eliminated from the struggle, for the time being at any rate. The same thing may be said, to a certain extent, as regards Italy, for the great Austrian drive of a few months ago so shortened the battlefront between the Adriatic and the Alps that German assistance became to a great extent unnecessary to enable the Austrians to at least hold the Italians, as events have proved.

There remained the French and the British. The German drive from St. Quentin against the British on March 21 we can now see clearly was only preparatory to what the enemy hoped would be a final blow at the French. It proved sufficiently successful to render the British incapable for the moment of all real offensive action, and left the enemy more or less a free hand as the German command assumed to deal with the French.

The German offensive in April (which was a mere diversion only,) in May, June, and July, followed. The three last named were directed solely against the French, and should, according to the information in the possession of the German General Staff, have proved entirely successful.

It is exactly on this question of information that the Germans proved to be woefully mistaken. Their intelligence service convinced them that the French had only a broken army, that their reserves had been used up, and that neither the French nor the British were in a position to react effectively.

It is the custom among the Allies to regard the German intelligence service as super efficient and our own as mediocre in character. For the time being silence is imposed, but future years may show to what extent the German defeat we are now witnessing has been due to the obscure and thankless, but devoted, tireless, and magnificently clever work of the British and French intelligence departments. After the splendidly successful manner in which the allied intelligence and contra espionage men led the great German General Staff into its fatal blunder on July 15 let us have no more disparagement of this little understood but too often abused service.

The enemy's grossly faulty intelligence service and Foch's ability to take swift advantage of it brought to nothing the German plans at the very moment victory appeared in sight. The object of the fifth consecutive offensive was to drive back Gouraud's army in the Champagne and capture Chalons and smash through Berthelot to the east of Rheims and seize Epernay, thus bringing about the fall of Rheims and cutting off Verdun and the armies of the east from Paris.

The next step was to have been to swing around on Paris from the south of Rheims and secure the capital by a general converging advance through the valleys of the Seine, the Marne, and the Oise. How bitter must be the disappointment of Germany is indicated by an article in the Vorwaerts on July 15, the first day of the offensive, which stated that the general opinion in Germany was that the campaign of the present Summer would be a pleasant military parade on an enormous scale, which would result in the final crushing of the enemy.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There is still no reason to doubt that the German retreat is proceeding with relative safety. The same general lines as those given last night are being followed, the flanks holding tight to their positions while the centre falls back. The fighting yesterday was apparently heavier and more continued than it had been for the previous two days. This is the natural course of events. As the Germans fall back, getting nearer and nearer to their ultimate line of defense, the number of men per mile of line is increased, giving the Germans greater force than when this line was somewhat attenuated by the long front of the salient. For this reason the rate of advance was lowered with the stiffening of the defense.

The fact that the Germans have made good their retreat does not mean that the Allies have not won an important victory as the result of their counter-offensive. In fact, quite the reverse is true. This victory exists in two phases. The first is the total and complete defeat of the German offensive. This is in itself no minor matter. The Germans must, because of time limitations, place full reliance on the success of each move. Where not one alone, but three separate offensives—the attack on Rheims, that down the Matz Valley, and this latter one on the Marne—have all signally failed, the Germans have full cause for worry.

This latter offensive is the most important of the three, as it was launched on a much greater scale. The Allies would have been in a serious predicament had it not failed. It is one thing for military students to minimize the value of territory in relation to the outcome of the war. It is another for the public, for the army behind the army, to absorb this point of view and credit it with the importance it merits. For civilian morale as well as for most important military reasons, then, the defeat of the German offensive was a most important event.

As for the offensive after the counter-blow had succeeded, the outcome is bringing its own justification. The Allies have captured a great number of prisoner—it should number nearly 40,000 before the Germans again settle down—a large number of guns, and have forced the destruction of large masses of material which it had taken the Germans a month to accumulate. This in itself is a serious blow. But more serious still is the blow which has been delivered to the German plans for the remainder of the year. The Germans were undoubtedly working on a giant scheme based on the occupation of French territory and the success of the German Army in driving back the allied lines toward the sea and toward the nerve centres of France.

A part of this scheme seems to have been another offensive movement against the British lines which have been for so long relatively quiet. Such an offensive may, indeed, still be launched, but we may be certain that if it is it will be minus the great driving power that it would have had had the Germans not been checked by Foch's move. Had the German move been successful, undoubtedly help would have been sent in some measure to the French from the British front. And the moment the British weakened their lines the Germans would have had an excellent opportunity to strike.

The situation is now materially changed, if not entirely reversed. The British have not had to weaken their front at all. One or two divisions may have been sent to the line west of Rheims, but that no material change has been made in the dispositions of the British Army is practically certain. The Germans, on the other hand, have had to draw on Prince Rupprecht's army to some extent. Relatively it has been weakened for more than has the British Army. Therefore instead of the German offensive altering the situation on the British front in favor of themselves, they have given the British an additional advantage.

The whole German plan has been entirely upset and must be rebuilt. In the meantime the Germans have nothing like the force with which to rebuild it as before the attack. Their own offensive was an expensive matter in human material. Particularly so was their effort along the Marne. They have also lost heavily as a result of the subsequent offensive. Foch in the meantime, through the arrival of American troops, is stronger than before he began.

As to yesterday's advance, it is particularly notable in one important sector—that from the Aisne to the Ourcq. Cugny and the Butte of Chalmont, just to the northeast, have been taken, giving the French a clear field of operation along the entire Ourcq Valley. The passage of the Ourcq should now be unopposed. Further we learn that the Allies have reached the village of Buzancy. Taken together the indication is that the German flanks are weakening in spite of the increasing numbers of the defense. This may yet cause trouble, as the Germans are not quite out of the woods, but have several miles to go before they reach safety.

HARDEN DEFENDS PRESIDENT WILSON

Never Has Shown Will for Destruction of German People, Editor Declares.

EXPLAINS HIS ATTITUDE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 29.—Maximilian Harden devotes the current number of Die Zukunft to the text of President Wilson's Mount Vernon speech and to combating the assertion that Mr. Wilson wants war to destruction.

"Chancellor von Hertling stated on July 11 in the Reichstag that President Wilson wanted war to destruction," says Harden, "but to know that one need not be doctor, professor, or Chancellor. If an enemy wishes to attack me I have no choice, and he would only destroy me a little sooner if I threw away my weapon and asked for grace. The child's talk of will to victory, destruction, carrying on, which the untiring still offer, like old kitchen crumbs from a paper bag, can be abandoned.

"Where is, then, in Wilson's speech the merest sign of a will to destruction? * * * Is the President of America a fool who takes a fancy on the other side of the Atlantic to tyrannize permanently over 65,000,000 Germans? A Nero, swollen up, according to the American standard, because of whose terrible destructive power whole peoples are bathed in blood and whole countries roasted in flames?

"In six big speeches, which have been published in Die Zukunft, Wilson has spoken of the German Government with bitterness, without ambiguity, and with the greatest consideration for the German people; definite, but satnding on two-pillar phrases: however the war ends the possibilities of life may not be restricted for the German people, nor any right denied to the German State which may be promised to any other people in the Old or the New World."

Harden argues that, although one part of the speech may appear Utopian and another part a blunt refusal, whoever scents a will to destruction therein has no nose. He says Burian received the speech even warmly, but where the Austro-Hungarian statesman warmly approves, Germany sees a will to destruction. Even in Wilson's most fiery Baltimore speech the writer cannot perceive this.

Harden asserts that the Socialists of the whole world, with few exceptions, approve Wilson's aims and asks: "Does the Chancellor know all this?" He dwells at length on events in Russia and on Kerensky, declaring that 70,000 well-armed Czechoslovaks, perhaps more, have mastered Siberia and are ready to support the Japanese inland march, while Anglo-French troops protect the Murman coast and guard the piles of war material and provisions, and Kerensky, who is again recognized as the head and can speak in the name of a majority of the people, has gone to Washington to plead for America's intervention.

Should this succeed, the writer says, the agreement made by Lansing and the representative of Japan will come into force, if it has not already done so, and Japanese tactics will not wait for a declaration of war. The program of the New Word order, Harden argues, binds all the powers united under America against Bolshevism.

BRANTING VISITS PERSHING.

Delighted with Our Troops, Especially Swedish-Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 29.—A dispatch from Stockholm to The Chicago Tribune says:

"After three days with General Pershing's forces, Hjalmar Branting, Swedish statesman and editor, has expressed himself as having received a profoundly confidence-inspiring impression of the American General and his troops. He was especially delighted to discover the number and spirit of the Swedish-American troops with Pershing. On one sector he found 15,000 Swedes, and in one division the majority of the men are of that nationality. Next year 200,000 Swedes are expected, constituting the greatest Swedish army ever assembled anywhere. Three centuries ago Gustavus Adolphus, with one-tenth as many Swedes, freed Europe from Austrian tyranny.

"Mr. Branting found wounded Swedes uncomplaining and perfectly cared for in the model hospital train belonging to the American Red Cross, for which the French have the greatest admiration. The worst suffering is caused by poison gas, of which a new mustard gas destroys the skin, while another form of gas blinds temporarily for at least three weeks.

"One day Mr. Branting motored some 300 kilometers and found the countryside swarming with Americans, their barracks covering immense areas. In some of the villages crowded with Americans, where the entire male population is at the front, one sees only women and children in the heartiest fraternizations with the Americans, who are especially kind and chivalrous, like big children helping the French children in their troubles and their tasks. Branting learned that there are now 1,100,000 Americans on and behind the front, and the beginning of 1919 will find 2,000,000, partly in the trenches and partly in instruction camps.

"General Pershing's discipline is strict, Branting observing that the American soldiers' salutation of officers is much more scrupulous than the French, who have become less ceremonious because of the length of the war. General Pershing impressed Mr. Branting as surprisingly youthful, but a vigorous, elastic, sportsmanslike type and an extremely courteous man of the world, giving an imposing impression of energy. He does not permit interviews, but he praised highly the Swedish-Americans as good citizens and excellent soldiers, loyally guarding their country's military interests and playing a great part in the current offensive.

"General Pershing received his Swedish guests at his headquarters in a small town, where he was attended by some 600 staff officers. During the visit came the news of the allied advancing counteroffensive, creating great pride and satisfaction among the Americans."

SAYS TURKEY BREAKS FROM GERMANY

that she had been unable to get the facts in the matter and the diplomatic incident growing out of the attack is still pending.

It was suggested at the time the attack on the Consulate was reported that war between the United States and Turkey would result. Nothing has taken place to indicate what the ultimate course of the United States will be. Reports are current that Turkey and Bulgaria are quarrelling over a division of Rumanian spoils. There have been suspicions that Turkey was fearful of being gobbled up by Germany after the war and would like the opportunity of quitting her Teutonic partnership.

It is suggested also that since the allied victories in the Rheims sector Turkey sees the handwriting on the wall that means the triumph of her enemies and wishes to save her face by withdrawing from the conflict at once.

There are persons in Washington who can interpret the report from Copenhagen as something to have been expected, but official opinion along that line is lacking. Turkey is so completely under German domination that she probably would be unable to break away from her partnership in any circumstances.

On Jan. 29 Dr. James L. Barton, Foreign Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, delivered an address in Boston in which he said:

"There is much reason to expect that Turkey will before long seek peace with the Allies. There is probably no difference of judgment that the war was begun and is continued for the purpose of establishing Germany's line of communication and sovereignty across the Balkans and Turkey to the Persian Gulf. Much of the discussion in the press these days, as well as utterances from Chancelleries of the world, refers almost exclusively to Belgium, Flanders, Alsace-Lorraine and Poland. These are but incidents in the war. So long as Germany can confine discussion to the West and keep the attention of the world from centering upon the Balkans and Turkey she will be gratified.

"At the present time Germany's hold on Bulgaria and Turkey is weakening every hour. The loss of Jerusalem and now more recently the two German battleships can result only in Turkey's sense of hopelessness in the struggle."

QUARREL OVER THE SPOILS.

Turkey Had Protested to Germany Over Share Bulgaria Was to Get.

If, as is reported, there has been a break in the relations between Germany and Turkey, the direct cause may well be that Turkey, who was a party to the treaty of peace accepted by the Bolsheviki of Russia at Brest-Litovsk, on March 3, and to that forced on Rumania at Bucharest on May 3, feels herself unjustly treated in regard to the distribution of spoils.

According to the non-Turkish Moslem press, however, Turkey has felt herself deserted by Germany ever since the Autumn of 1916, when most of the Germans who had been sent into Asia to aid the Turks in a second attack upon the Suez Canal and to defend the upper Tigris were withdrawn to Europe on account of Rumania's participation in the war. To meet this Turkish discontent at being left to shift for herself German officials at Constantinople are reported to have assured the Turkish Government that its interests would be properly locked after when Germany had forced peace on western Europe by her armies. Meanwhile, however, Turkey was being sucked dry of her products by the Germans, and thousands of Turks were being lost in vainly trying to keep the British from advancing through Palestine and up the Tigris.

As to the disputes over the distribution of the spoils of war: For a long time there have been rumors that Turkey was opposed to the share of Rumania that Bulgaria was to receive and that Turkey also was looking with jealous eyes toward the Black Sea littoral, the Caucasus, and the Balkans.

Announcement was made in the Reichstag in June that differences had arisen between Bulgaria and Turkey over the division of lands taken from Rumania under the peace agreement with the Central Powers. The announcement was made by Dr. von Kühlmann, the German Foreign Secretary, who said that the provisional arrangement, which it was desired should continue as short a time as possible, must find its rational solution in the union of Northern Dobrudja with Bulgaria in accordance with the desires of the Bulgarian people.

The Foreign Secretary added that the question was a difference of opinion between two of Germany's allies, to whom Germany was bound by exactly equal ties, and that everything must be avoided which would cause the impression to prevail abroad that Germany's policy favored the claims of the one ally at the expense of the other.

The Cologne Gazette early in June asserted that the differences between Turkey and Bulgaria involved a certain danger that the "work of harmony achieved by the Central Powers at Bucharest may suffer." The newspaper added that both Bulgaria and Turkey were claiming Germany's full support in their respective interests. The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the semi-official German Government organ, however, declared that the dispute over Dobrudja was one on which Turkey and Bulgaria would have to come to an agreement, and that Germany could only express herself reservedly on the matter if Germany was not to assume heavy responsibilities for the future.

A few days later the Berlin Vossische Zeitung printed an article by its constantinople correspondent declaring that the political censorship in Turkey had been abolished in order to permit Turkish newspapers to attack Bulgaria.

Announcement was made some time ago that Germany and Turkey were in a hot dispute over the disposition of Russia's Black Sea fleet. Talaat Pasha, the Turkish Grand Vizier, replying to deputations from the Turkish Navy League, which pointed out that Turkey had an incontestable claim to the fleet, said negotiations were proceeding between Germany and Russia for the handing over of the fleet to Germany, but that the Turkish Government had taken energetic action with a view to acquiring it.

Turkey's ambitions in the Black Sea littoral and in the Caucasus recently were attacked by the Pan German Berlin newspaper, Kreuz-Zeitung.

"Turkey's idea," said the newspaper, "seems to be to gain a dominating position in the Black Sea, making the Pan Turkish idea paramount there and creating in the Caucasus a strong rampart between Turkey and Russia. Hence, German policy is confronted with difficult tasks."

The successor to Mohammed V., who died on July 3, has not been fully identified. The cable dispatches have spoken of him merely as Mohammed VI. Some reference was made to Wahid-ed-Din, the official heir-apparent, but he was reported to have been assassinated some months ago for his pro-ally proclivities. He was the eldest brother of the late Sultan.

On July 6 THE TIMES contained an interview on the subject with Salih Bey Jorgouagi, formerly President of the Turkish official news agency of Constantinople, who resigned and came here when Turkey entered the war. He identified the new ruler as "Prince Vakid Eddine," which is merely another spelling for Wahid-ed-Din, who is supposed to be dead.

Prince Vakid Eddine, he said, was a man of strong will and had been intense in his hatred of those in power. He was opposed to the Committee on Union and Progress, his hatred being especially bitter against Talaat Pasha, who is now Grand Vizier, and Enver Pasha, Minister of War, who controlled the Government under Mohammed V. Prince Vakid Eddine has shown himself to be in sympathy with the Armenians and against the policy that has been pursued toward them.

"The Prince has shown on many occasions that he has a very liberal spirit," said Mr. Jorgouagi. "It is known that the plot organized in 1913 was led by his son-in-law, and it has since been discovered that the plot against the committee was organized at the palace of Prince Eddine. The Prince is strongly against Germany, or was when I left Turkey, and was quite friendly to England and France.

"Knowing him personally, as I do, and knowing him to be a man of strong will, I expect a big change to take place, and the whole world will look with interest to what Turkey does."

FERDINAND LEAVES BULGARIA.

For His Health, Say German Papers —His People Tired of War.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—An official dispatch from France today says German newspapers report King Ferdinand of Bulgaria gone to "foreign lands" for some time on account of his health.

According to the Neue Freie Presse, a Bulgarian personage on his way through Vienna, admitted that the Bulgarian people were very tired of the war and had prospects of a poor harvest.

WANTS IRISH CASE LEFT TO WILSON

TASK TOO BIG, SAYS ASQUITH

Motion of Nationalist Leader Condemning Government's Policy Beaten by 245 to 106.

LONDON, July 29.—A debate in the House of Commons today on the Irish question ended in the defeat of the Irish adherents. A motion by John Dillon, the Nationalist leader, condemning the Government's Irish policy was rejected by a vote of 245 to 106.

Mr. Dillon suggested that the question of Ireland be referred to President Wilson. This was well received by the House, but, as former Premier Asquith pointed out, it could not be expected that the President of the United States would undertake such an arduous task at this time, and the matter was obviously one which the British people would have to settle themselves.

The question was one of overwhelming importance, Mr. Asquith said, and he made a strong appeal to the Government to make another effort, even at the eleventh hour, to settle it.

The Chief Secretary for Ireland, Edward Shortt, made a speech conciliatory in tone, but it did not conciliate the Nationalists. They received the warmest support from the Labor Party, whose spokesman, William Adamson, member for West Fife, announced that Mr. Dillon's motion would receive its support, the Labor Party believing that the Irish question could be settled by a generous measure of home rule, and, he added, the British people ought to grant it now.

Dillon Urges Settlement.

Introducing his motion, which expresses the view that the "true solution of the Irish question is to put in operation without delay in regard to Ireland the principles laid down by President Wilson," Mr. Dillon admitted that the Nationalist party was in difficulty, but, he added, it was "because we have struggled to save the constitutional position and bring Ireland into the war, while the Government has done everything in its power to drive her out of the war."

The Nationalist leader said the question of Ireland was a war question, and that was why he brought it up at the present time. How could Great Britain, he asked, put before the world as one of her objects in the war the freeing of small nationalities when there was Ireland lying at her back door "under the unhappy tyranny of a military Government?"

Blames British Rule for Plots.

The Irish were holding back in the war, Mr. Dillon said, because they believed the Government was determined to break faith with Ireland and deny her the right which she had won after a long and patient struggle. There had been a German plot in Ireland before the war; there had been a German plot in Ireland since the war. They had three objects: First, to deprive the British of Irish help; second, to compel Great Britain to keep a large number of British troops in Ireland; third, to weaken the moral position of Britain in dealing with the cause of small nations.

The Germans, said Mr. Dillon, had succeeded simply and solely because of the operations of the British Government.

The way to conquer German plots, the Irish Nationalist leader went on, was not to break faith with, but to win the sympathy of, the Irish people. No one in Ireland believed in any pledge of the British Government, or that the Government would stick to any policy whatever.

Mr. Dillon counseled the Premier to settle the Irish question by referring it to President Wilson, or else by taking it in his own hands and abandoning at once all coercive measures. The Premier might very well ask America, he added, to render another great service to humanity in the reconciliation of Ireland and England.

Joseph Devlin, Nationalist for West Belfast, ridiculed the idea that the Nationalists had not done their fair share in sending recruits to the army. Deducting from Ulster's contribution those who were Nationalists, Mr. Devlin said, the figures stood 38,000 for Ulster and 55,000 for the Nationalists.

After the Nationalists had converted this country to home rule through forty years of constitutional action, he proceeded, they had been denied what they had won, and the Sinn Fein had received its opportunity. The Nationalists now made the definite proposal to the Government that it put in operation the principles which President Wilson had declared the Allies were fighting for.

The Government could get recruits by establishing a system of Government in Ireland based on the people's will, said Mr. Devlin, and intrusting recruiting, to agents of the Irish Parliament. Secretary Shortt, he declared, would no more succeed with his policy than his predecessors had done.

Sir George H. Reid moved an amendment gratefully acknowledging the services of the men of Irish birth or descent in the allied army, but deploring "the organized attempts made in many parts of Ireland to prevent Irishmen from joining their English, Scottish, and Welsh fellow-citizens in defense of the liberties enjoyed by all the free nations and securing the emancipation of oppressed nationalities."

Shortt Asks Irish Help.

Replying to Mr. Dillon's speech on his motion, Edward Shortt, Secretary for Ireland, said that the Government had been compelled to take strong action in Ireland because there was a complete military system in Southwest Ireland, worked out with considerable skill and knowledge. Instructions were given, the Secretary said, as to how to cut railways and destroy bridges and communications, while explosives had been secretly imported.

The Secretary said that Ireland had been infinitely quieter since the Sinn Fein leaders were arrested and put out of harm's way. Before that the country had been seething in sedition.

A very small use, he said, had been made of the Crimes act. A certain number of societies had been declared dangerous, but that was intended mainly as a warning. The Government wanted to avoid conscription, if that were possible, but no help toward that end had been received from the Nationalists.

The Secretary asked Mr. Dillon if he were in charge of Ireland would he grant the demand for an independent republic.

"Certainly not," Mr. Dillon responded.

Ireland was now exceedingly prosperous, Mr. Shortt said, and he hoped that something might yet be done to make her contented as well as bring about an era of good feeling that would make it possible to pass the home rule measure, which twelve months ago the whole country desired, but which today could not be passed in England at any general election. He appealed to the Irish members to do all they could to make recruiting in Ireland a success.

Try Again, Asquith Urges.

Ex-Premier Asquith made an appeal to the Government in the interests of the country, the empire, and the Entente Allies to try again, even at the eleventh hour, to find a settlement of the Irish question. Regarding the suggestion by Mr. Dillon that the question be referred to President Wilson, Mr. Asquith said:

"He would be a very bold man who would expect Mr. Wilson to undertake a task which has baffled so many pioneers in the past. If it could not be referred to members of our own family, it does not seem that a question of that kind could well be submitted to the arbitrament of a foreign country, however friendly."

The debate had made clear, said Mr. Asquith, "the supreme and overwhelming importance of the settlement of the Irish question." The adoption of a man power bill this year applicable to Ireland had increased the difficulty of a settlement. An atmosphere had been created in Ireland which had shifted for the time being the balance of political power from the Constitutional to the Revolutionary Party. That was a very serious state of affairs.

"How are you going to have a league of nations?" asked Mr. Dillon.

"There are many difficulties in the way of a league of nations," replied Mr. Asquith.

"Ireland will be one," interjected Mr. Dillon.

"I entirely agree," said Mr. Asquith. "But this Irish question is one which we must settle for ourselves and by ourselves."

PEACE DEMAND IN VIENNA.

Reichsrat Refuses to Vote on a Czech Resolution.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—A resolution declaring in favor of an immediate peace without annexations and indemnities was offered in the Austrian lower House on Saturday by Deputy Stanek on behalf of the Czech League. The resolution declared that a continuation of the war was useless from the viewpoint of both humanity and political utility. It asserted that all peoples should have the right to self-determination, and asked that the House demand that Austria-Hungary oppose the annexationist and imperialistic policy which had gained the upper hand in Germany and try itself to find a way to find a democratic peace.

The House, says a Vienna dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, which reports the incident, rejected the resolution as inadmissible for submission to a vote.

Deputy Stanek said that the Czech people would become great and strong despite the persecutions of a narrow-minded Government. The Czechs never before were so ready to fight, so certain of victory. They were united in firm will, he added, and never again would bear a foreign yoke. The Czecho-Slovak State was a fact which could not be averted.

LEGION OF HONOR FOR ACE.

Lieut. Nungesser, Who Has Downed 31 Airplanes, Is Cited.

PARIS, July 29.—Lieutenant Nungesser, the second French Ace, was cited for the Legion of Honor today, having brought down, according to the official announcement, thirty-one German airplanes and destroyed three observation balloons. He has received many wounds, has been cited fifteen times, and is created an officer of the Legion of Honor for "his superb example of courage."

Lieutenant Nungesser, speaking tonight of the honor conferred upon him, said:

"I have no ambition to become the Ace of Aces. I simply bring down as many Germans as possible."

BRITISH CORDIAL TO F. D. ROOSEVELT

GOING TO FRENCH WAR ZONE

Hopes Other Washington Officials Will Visit Allies—60% of Our Troopships British.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt is having a most satisfactory visit. When I saw him this morning he was just starting on a shopping expedition to buy a costume suitable for the war zone in France.

"I think that as many members of the Washington Administration as can get away should visit Europe," he said. "No matter how well informed one may be, he can only arrive at a full realization of conditions on this side by seeing them face to face."

Mr. Roosevelt spent three days with Sir Eric Geddes, and the two men thus had an opportunity to compare notes fully and form a personal friendship.

"From the beginning," said Mr. Roosevelt, "the allied navies have worked together in complete harmony. Without any formal arrangement, we have had true unity."

On all hands I hear pleasant comment about Mr. Roosevelt. No American visitor has made a finer impression.

LONDON, July 29.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the American Navy, had a long interview with King George this morning.

Afterward Mr. Roosevelt was entertained by the American Luncheon Club, the guests also including Sir Eric Geddes, and the members of the Naval Committee of the American House of Representatives. In an address at the luncheon, Sir Eric said:

"There is no branch of Anglo-American activity in which co-operation and comradeship are more marked and more complete than in the navy. There are more than 250 American warships now based on this side, and Mr. Roosevelt has assured us that this number will increase faster in the future than in the past.

"We are glad to welcome all these additions to the allied naval strength, because every additional ship means a more strenuous war against submarines.

"Large numbers of ships are being required nowadays for the work of escorting incoming American transports. If a ship is on escort duty it cannot be hunting and fighting submarines. So the additional American forces will mean the release of a similar number of British vessels for intensive offensive work against U-boats."

Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I came over here with the object of learning. That is why I came across the Atlantic in a destroyer. I shall spend most of my few weeks on this side in actually seeing things being done.

"Sir Eric Geddes and myself have already visited Queenstown, and we have found things working there just as I had dreamed they ought to be working—a keen, unified energy of British and American forces aiming at a common end. It has been a great pleasure to meet Sir Eric, to travel with him on an American destroyer, and to find him a 'he man,' talking in our own language.

"The United States owes much to the untiring work of the British Navy, for it is a fact that about 60 per cent. of the troopships carrying Americans to Europe are British ships and have been escorted by British men-of-war.

"The United States has, I believe, at last struck its stride in naval construction, and we shall deliver ships very rapidly henceforth."

As an evidence of the efficiency of the convoy system since it was established by the Admiralty about a year ago, it is pointed out that an average of only one ship out of nearly 200 has been lost.

German Army Suffers Now from Tetanus Epidemic

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—Tetanus has broken out to a serious extent in the German Army, according to the Telegraaf.

The Netherlands Export Company has agreed to send a large consignment of anti-tetanus serum to Germany.

MANY ENTER KNITTING BEE.

Woman of 83 Years Joins Novel Central Park Contest.

Several hundred knitters, young and old, men and women, have entered the knitting bee contest under the auspices of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Chairman, which opens in the Mall at Central Park at 1 P. M. today. One of the contestants for the knitting bee who entered yesterday was Mrs. F. J. Lunaschloss of 371 West 116th Street, who is 83 years old. Mrs. Lunaschloss knits eight hours every day for the soldiers, and says that she is going to keep it up as long as the war lasts.

A contest among six blind women will be one of the features today. The one knitting a four-inch square soonest will win the prize. There will be a knitting machine contest among firemen and Louis Mann and Sam Bernard, co-stars in "Friendly Enemies," who have been practicing for several weeks, to see who can drop the fewest stitches in five minutes.

ice resulted, apart from the destruction of large quantities of war material and supplies, in the infliction of enormous economic damage on the enemy.

"The enemy's losses in ships and cargoes alone to July 1, 1918, are estimated to surpass 50,000,000,000 marks."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—An official dispatch from Berne, received today, indicated that the German Admiralty is seeking to reassure the German people concerning the campaign conducted by German U-boats, but is having a difficult time explaining why submarines have not been able to halt the movement of American troopships to France.

The dispatch stated that the many allusions made in the German press to the presence of more than a million American soldiers in France, combined with figures showing a diminution in the tonnage sunk by boats in June, have brought German public opinion to the conclusion that the submarine campaign has resulted in failure. In an effort to reassure the public, Admiral von Holtzendorff, Chief of the German Naval Staff, gave a statement to the Berlin representatives of the Strassburger Post and the Koelnische Zeitung, which the Wolff Agency reports as follows:

"The Chief of the Admiralty realizes that the Entente has now considerably more tonnage at its disposal, thanks to the requisitioning of neutral tonnage, but the situation remains favorable to Germany. The submarine peril is not averted. We can face the future with confidence.

"The correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung asked the Admiral: 'How is it that the submarines have affected so small a number of American transports?'

"Holtzendorff gave the following answer: 'Why should the German submarines be especially launched for the chasing of American transports carry-the troops? The Americans have at their disposal a number of shores where they can land troops, shores which stretch from the northern point of Scotland to the French ports of the Mediterranean.

"'There are numerous landing places. Should we therefore place our submarines at the entrance of ports in the hope of being able to shoot at a transport forming a part of a rapid and efficient convoy?'"

U-Boat, Disguised, Trying to Trap Vessels

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 29.—Three transatlantic liners which arrived here today reported having been attacked by German submarines, each of them when about 200 miles off the Atlantic coast. All three vessels by superior speed escaped undamaged after a running fight which lasted several hours.

The master of another vessel in port today said that three days ago wireless calls were caught by his ship coming from a vessel in plain sight asking for assistance, but which upon closed observation proved to be a submarine with telescopic masts and was in many respects made up to imitate a sailing vessel in a sinking condition.

OUR ARMY IN LONDON.

Warehouse, Hospitals, and Other Buildings Taken Over for Them.

LONDON, July 29.—A rapid expansion of American Army headquarters in London is in progress. Three new buildings were taken over last week, including a large warehouse for the Quartermaster's Department. Two hospitals were recently opened by the Medical Department of the army, and these will be running at full capacity within a few days.

A large building in the centre of the city will be equipped this week as a "liaison office," to house various activities, involving dealings between the American and British armies. The Provost Marshal has a new office in Golden Square, near Piccadilly Circus, where all officers and enlisted men arriving in London must register within twelve hours.

Many members of Queen Mary's auxiliary army corps have been attached to the American armies in France and are doing extremely useful work. More will be sent to the American armies in future. Two London clubhouses had been taken over for the work of the organization. Mrs. David Lloyd George is President of the project and members of the Government are interested in it.

Chance to Get Artillery Commission.

The Field Artillery Central Officers' Training School, at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky, will graduate a class of about 1,000 officers on Aug. 17. The school is seeking additional candidates for instruction in the artillery branch of the service. Lieutenant Henry Herrman, one of the instructors, may be communicated with at the camp, near Louisville.

MT. VERNON LOSES FIRST BOY IN BATTLE

2 MORE UPTON MEN IN LIST

Lieut. Col. Russell C. Hand, U. S. A., whose home was in Sioux City, Iowa, and whose death from wounds received in action in France was announced in yesterday's list from General Pershing, was a Captain in the Eighteenth United States Infantry when Congress declared war. He enlisted in the Second Cavalry in 1898 as a private and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant of the Tenth Infantry in July, 1900. His old regiment, the Eighteenth, is now one of the four infantry units of the First Division of regulars under Major Gen. Bullard, and it is probable that he was a battalion commander of that unit when he received the wound that caused his death. Lieut. Col. Hand was 44 years of age, and was born in South Dakota. He served in the Spanish war, in the Philippines, and at Vera Cruz.

Mrs. Charles D. Dubois of 14 Walden Place, Montclair, received a telegram from the War Department on Sunday night, announcing that her son, Lieutenant Norman Dubois of the 149th Field Artillery of the Rainbow Division, had been killed in action. Lieutenant Dubois was a graduate of Williams College, and won his commission at the first Plattsburg camp. His father, the late Cornelius D. Dubois, was one of Montclair's most prominent citizens.

The deaths in action of Colonel Hamilton A. Smith, Lieut. Col. Clark Elliott, Captain A. R. Hemel, Captain James H. Holmes, Captain J. A. Wood, Jr., Captain J. N. C. Richards, and Lieutenant J. C. Loder, reported in yesterday's list, were cabled to this country by The Associated Press last Friday.

Lieutenant Joseph R. Busk, reported severely wounded in yesterday's casualty list, is in the 38th United States Infantry, which is one of the units of the 3d Division of regulars, under command of Major Gen. Dickman. Lieutenant Busk is one of the two soldier sons of Frederick T. Busk of 3 East Eighty-fifth Street. He is a Harvard man and also a Plattsburg graduate. He was a member of the Harvard Training Battalion when Congress declared war, and immediately asked for a transfer to the First Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg, and was one of the first Plattsburgers selected for assignment to the regular army. He joined the 38th Infantry at Syracuse, and was subsequently ordered to Charlotte, N. C. He sailed for France last March. Colonel Halstead Dorey, who commanded the First Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg in 1915, is a field officer of the 38th Infantry.

Lieutenant Busk is 23 years of age. A cablegram which he sent to his father stated that he had been wounded in the groin, and that he was convalescing in a base hospital behind the allied lines. His brother, who is also in France, is Captain Frederick W. Busk of the 310th Infantry of the National Army.

Captain Cooke Killed in Accident.

Captain Paul L. Cooke, who is listed in yesterday's casualty list as having died in an accident, was a son of the late Gen. William R. C. Cooke of the United States Army. Captain Cooke entered the army last August, and sailed for France five months ago. For many years Captain Cooke, who was 42 years of age, practiced medicine in Birmingham, Ala. At the time he joined the army he was living at 630 West 135th Street, this city. His wife, who is with relatives in Toronto, is a cousin of the late Charles Stewart Parnell. Captain Cooke is also survived by his mother, who is in Virginia.

Major Roy W. Gausmann of Leonia, N. J., severely wounded, was born in Brooklyn and is 36 years of age. He was educated in the public schools of Hackensack and took an engineering course at Columbia University. He went to France three months ago. His family is in the Catskills.

Lieut. Lawrence C. Lovell was killed in an airplane accident on June 29, according to word which reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Lovell of 126 Parkside Avenue, Brooklyn. The last letter received by his mother was dated June 28, the day before he fell to his death. Lieutenant Lovell was 21 years of age, and a graduate of Erasmus Hall High School. He also attended Pratt Institute. He went to the Mexican border in 1916 with the 2d Signal Company of Brooklyn, and when that unit was transferred to the Federal service he was detached and ordered to the aviation section.

Private Benjamin Goldman, killed in action, was a Camp Upton division soldier. He was a member of the machine gun company of the 307th Infantry. He was born in Russia and lived at 321 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, when drafted. He is survived by a wife and one child. Private Goldman was killed on July 9, according to a War Department telegram to his wife.

Another Camp Upton Division man in yesterday's list, reported severely wounded, is Mechanic William Manz of 1,275 Third Avenue, Manhattan. He was drafted last September and was wounded, according to advices received by his mother, on June 24.

F. Rochwoicz, dead of wounds, was 23 years of age and was in Company I of the 102d Infantry of the New England Division. His parents, when last heard from, were still alive in the German occupied section of Poland. Rochwoicz's home was at 208 Pavonia Avenue, Jersey City.

Paterson Boy Is Missing.

Corporal Edward J. Farrell, Jr., 24, son of Edward J. Farrell of 415 South Second Avenue, Mount Vernon, who was killed in action on July 13, was a member of Company C, 101st Field Battalion, Signal Corps. His father received a telegram announcing his death on Saturday night. He was the first Mount Vernon boy killed in battle in the war. He was employed as an "ad" writer when the United States entered the war. A week later he enlisted in the Signal Corps, and early in July was sent to Pratt Institute for training in radio work. He went to France late in November.

In a letter to his father on June 1 he describes his experience in going "over the top" and the barrage that protected him. The description ended with "Nevertheless, I enjoyed every moment of it, though I was exhausted when I got back, and am still sore and stiff. His brother, Joseph, 22, is a Corporal in the 407th Telegraph Battalion.

Private William T. Checkley of 998 East Twenty-fifth Street, Paterson, N. J., missing in action, was in the Second Regiment of Engineers of the regular army. Government advices to his parents state that he has been missing since June 26. He has two brothers in the army in France.

Private Frank P. Parmley, severely wounded, has a sister living at 64 Emmett Street, Newark. He is in the regular army. His brother William is also in France with the regulars.

Robert J. Turner, who was a seaman on the transport Covington when that ship was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine and who was supposed to have gone down with the ship, has been heard from. His mother, Mrs. Charles Turner of 114 Colden Avenue, Flushing, received a letter from him yesterday. He wrote from a base hospital in France.

Private John Forbes Amory, reported missing in the casualty list published last Saturday, was a member of the 107th Infantry of the New York Division, which includes the old Seventh Infantry of the National Guard of New York. Private Amory enlisted last August and went to France as a member of the headquarters company of that command. He was one of four brothers in the service.

AMERICAN ARMY TO BE UNIFIED

WILL ANNOUNCE PLAN SOON

All Three Branches to be Welded Into "The United States Army," with All Units Interchangeable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—A readjustment of the several combatant branches of the United States Army in the interest of co-ordination and unity will soon be announced by the War Department. Secretary Baker today declined to comment on the new plan other than to say that announcement would be made shortly by General March, the Chief of the General Staff.

The reticent attitude of the War Department guards details of the plan, and it is not possible to obtain any statement of its scope or character. The understanding is that the new arrangement provides for erasing the lines of differentiation between the regular army, the National Guard in the service of the United States, and the National Army, thus bringing the entire land forces of the nation into one harmonious whole without distinction as to the various branches.

The plan apparently contemplates making it possible for troops of any one of the three branches named to be transferred into either of the other branches; or, put in another way, there will be no distinction between soldiers or units of the present three branches. Officers of the National Guard, for example, might be transferred out of State organizations into regular army or National Army commands, while officers of the National Army might be sent to State organizations now designated as "National Guard in the service of the United States." In the same manner, it is believed, regiments of the National Guard or the National Army might be brigaded with regiments of the regular army or regular regiments transferred to brigades or divisions now entirely made up of commands from the National Guard or the National Army.

Up to this time the line of demarkation between the three branches of the combatant military service has been rather rigidly preserved in the formation of units as large as divisions. Thus the 42d, or Rainbow Division, is composed of nearly thirty separate units, all of which are of the National Guard organizations of the several States represented. In the same way the 77th Division, from Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., is made up entirely of National Army units. The 27th Division, which trained at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., is composed entirely of New York National Guard units. The 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, and 5th Divisions, all of which are in France, are composed of regiments of the regular army. Under the understanding as to the new arrangement these distinctive lines would be wiped out and the amalgamated land forces would be designated as "The United States Army."

A considerable number of drafted men have been transferred to the regular army and the National Guard, which were fundamentally raised by voluntary enlistment, to fill regiments that lacked full strength, but the regular and National Guard regiments still preserve their original designations, such as 1st Regiment, Infantry, United States Army, or 165th Infantry, (69th New York,) National Guard, in the service of the United States.

In order to preserve a geographical or local grouping of divisional units, Congress provided in the Selective Service act that men from each geographical community should be grouped together as far as possible, but left it to the War Department to use its discretion in the matter. In the earlier stages of our entrance into the war the sentiment of Congress so expressed was adhered to fairly well, but later the War Department began to disregard State and lesser communal lines and transfer men from one camp to another without regard to geographical considerations.

This was particularly the case with respect to National Guard organizations which lacked sufficient men to fill infantry regiments under the policy of increasing their strength from approximately 1,200 men to approximately 3,600 men. When the War Department first applied the principle of using drafted men to fill up the gaps in National Guard organizations, it usually made its selections from drafted men from the States in which the National Guard commands to which they were transferred were raised. Later, however, State lines were disregarded and drafted men from one part of the country were transferred to State units from a part of the country remote from the homes of the drafted men.

It is believed, although there has never been any authoritative acknowledgment, that the War Department's purpose in this respect was based partly on the desire to mix the men from various sections, on the theory that the material as well as the psychological effect would be good if men from North, South, East, and West were mingled together in comparatively small military units. This policy is being carried out now in greater degree than during the earlier period of our war experience, although, as a general thing, men called to the colors under the selective draft, are mobilized in camps nearest their homes.

The War Department is organizing new divisions which will bear some of the divisional numbers assigned to the regular army—from 1 to 25. In forming regular army divisions the War Department left a gap in numbers between 8 and 15. The new divisions, numbered from 9 to 14, inclusive, will fill the numerical gap, and the opportunity will be afforded to have these divisions formed of both regular and National Army regiments. Up to this time the department has adhered to a system under which the divisional numbers assigned to the National Guard were 26 to 75, and to the National Army from 76 up. The new arrangement would tend to wipe out these distinctive designations, so that to say that a regiment was in the 20th Division would not mean necessarily that it was a regular army regiment.

Very excellent effects are credited to the practice of placing green troops in the same divisional or brigade unit with troops that have had actual battle practice. This practice has been followed by the United States in sifting in regimental or small units of American troops with veteran troops of the French and British army for preliminary training behind the lines, and for a first experience at the fighting front. It may be that the War Department, under the plan soon to be announced, contemplates placing regiments that have had long training under regular officers, with troops of shorter service that have not been trained under professional soldiers.

ENLISTMENT AND DRAFT.

Senate Resolution to Ascertain Whether Men Can Volunteer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Senators are already wondering whether under the coming changes in the draft law men subject to the draft will be allowed to volunteer. Senator Sterling of South Dakota today asked the Secretary of War this question through a resolution. This recited that some men who tried to enlist had been rejected on physical grounds, and had then been accepted in the draft, and continued:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to inform the Senate whether, in his opinion, permission given to men subjected to draft under such or similar circumstances to now volunteer or permission to their assignment to volunteer regiments would materially affect the service; whether or not the Department of War contemplates any action looking to the transfer of such men to the volunteer service, and whether, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, such transfer is permissible under existing law."

Senator Hiram Johnson of California said he understood that volunteering would be prohibited.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota remarked that a good many men now seeking to enlist were merely "looking for some soft snap," such a running automobiles for officers or some other work that would keep them away from the firing line. Mr. Nelson, who is one of the two civil war veterans in the Chamber, read from a statement showing that a large number of the Marine Corps fighting about Château-Thierry were under 21 years old. He used this as an argument to prove that men under that age were the best fighting material.

"I can't understand the sentiment that it is a harmful thing to let boys volunteer," he said. "Don't cork up their patriotism."

AMERICAN PRISONERS LODGED IN MANNHEIM

GENEVA, July 28, (Associated Press.)—Thirty-two Americans, including some officers, recently captured by the Germans have been lodged near the railroad station at Mannheim, on the Rhine, according to a report received in Basle.

President Reduces Life Sentence Imposed on Army Deserter.

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 29.—Fifteen years in a Federal prison is the punishment fixed for Brent Dow Allinson, Chicago slacker. A court-martial at Camp Grant found him guilty of violating the 85th Article of War. The technical crime of which he was convicted was that of deserting military duty.

It is understood the court-martial sentenced Allinson to life imprisonment. The case went to President Wilson for review, and the sentence was commuted to fifteen years.

Allinson, a Harvard graduate, was appointed to a post in the Government Consular Service and assigned to Berne, Switzerland. He was arrested in Washington on April 20, after refusing to report to his Chicago board. He has been in a guardhouse at Camp Grant since April 22, having persistently refused to do military service.

Your Credit Is As Good As Your Balance
When You Have a D.A. Account With Us

Our Shopping System known as the Depositor's Account (D. A.) system is a sane, fair, sound, War Saving method of buying merchandise. Throughout our sixty years' merchandising we have found nothing of its kind that can take its place.

Deposit An Amount at 4% as you would with a bank account. Against this you charge yourself for the purchases you make. Your deposits draw interest from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, and may be withdrawn in part or in whole at any time without notice.

Bear in Mind that in addition to the 4% your money earns, it saves another 6% at least for you whenever you buy through it, as our merchandise is priced that much below prices elsewhere in the city.

You Are Charged through the ordinary credit houses a price for your goods which, as Benjamin Franklin very tersely says, covers an amount "equivalent to the principal and interest of his money" for the time the storekeeper is "kept out of it."

During the War when the idea of thrift is made a symbol of our duty to the nation, we know of no way in which shopping can be made a part of this patriotic service as it can through this simple system of the D. A.

Another Idea bound up in the D. A. system of shopping, is the check which it unconsciously exerts over the several members of one's household toward careful spending. Your family's temptation to spend is limited by the balance standing to your credit. And until additional cash is deposited, this balance acts as a danger sign to extravagance.

ARREST GERMAN AS WIRELESS SUSPECT

FIND PART OF APPARATUS

Secret Service Agents Believe He May Have Been in Communication with Raiding U-Boats.

Bruno Oppermann, a German who has made the United States his home for more than twenty years, was brought to New York by agents of the Department of Justice yesterday and locked up in the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, pending the investigation of a report that he had been operating a wireless apparatus on his farm near Englishtown, N. J., a little settlement about twenty miles west of Long Branch. Some weeks ago Rear Admiral Usher, Commandant of the Third Naval District, offered a reward of $1,000 for information concerning any German U-boat base on the North Atlantic coast, and Oppermann, it was said yesterday, is held on suspicion that he may have been in a position to communicate with the U-boats which have been operating off this coast.

Agents of the Department of Justice found parts of a wireless transmission machine, while a tall flagpole which was erected near the pigpen on Oppermann's place could have been used as an aerial. The arrest of the German followed an investigation of enemy alien activities at Lakewood, Manasquan, and other places in New Jersey, the purpose of the investigation being to determine whether or not secret means for communicating with German U-boats existed along the coast. It was reported that aerial wires were also found on Oppermann's place, but this part of the report was neither verified nor denied by the Federal authorities.

Oppermann is said to have been arrested several days ago, but was not brought to the Enemy Alien Bureau in the Federal Building until yesterday. He is 41 years old and was born in Saxony. When asked yesterday why he came to this country, he replied that he came in search of adventure.

Oppermann's farm of only a few acres is in a thickly wooded section of the State and his house is hidden from view behind a clump of pine trees. When it was searched among Oppermann's effects was found a German military pass made out to "Heinrich Bruno Oppermann." Oppermann admitted the pass was issued to him several years ago. He denied that he had been concerned in any activities of any kind on behalf of his fatherland. He was examined for more than an hour yesterday afternoon by Captain Roger B. Hull, U. S. A.

Waldo Hess, a German reservist, was also taken to the Enemy Alien Bureau yesterday and questioned by Perry Armstrong. Hess has been employed by a firm in the Bronx, which has important Government contracts. He, too, was committed to the Raymond Street Jail, pending further investigation.

Theodor Moja, a German subject, was brought to this city yesterday from White Plains, where he was detected taking photographs of the Croton Aqueduct. Moja is employed by the city as janitor of a public library. He is 56 years old and has been in this country since 1901. He has been back to Germany since the war started in 1914 and he said yesterday that he hopes to go back again after the war ends. He is in Raymond Street Jail.

Emil Picht, who was arrested early Sunday morning at Eighty-sixth Street and Madison Avenue, and who at that time was dressed in woman's clothes, was arraigned before Capt. Hull yesterday. He served seven years in the German artillery before he came to this country in 1911. In 1913 he went to Germany, but returned just before the outbreak of war in 1914. Picht is also held for further investigation.

Karl Montanus, a German, who has been working for the Standard Aero Corporation, was arrested at Plainfield yesterday as a dangerous enemy subject. Since leaving the employ of the Standard Corporation he is said to have been working as a detective in the employ of a well-known New York agency. No information was given out yesterday as to the charges against Montanus.

Barnett Gellman of 255 Bowery, who was arrested at Glen Cove yesterday charged with spreading enemy propaganda, said he was in the employ of the Quartermaster's Department on Governors Island. He is charged with selling German flags at a religious parade. He said he was born in Russia and that he has been in this country fifteen years.

The Federal Grand Jury is expected to hand down indictments in the German propaganda cases this week. The names of several persons who have been examined by Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker, among them a former well-known Washington newspaper correspondent, have not been made public as yet. The correspondent is said to have entered into a sub rosa contract with Dr. Dernburg, and was supposed to have been in a position to give "valuable information as to what was going on in Washington" to the Kaiser's representatives.

WILSON MAY BAR LIQUOR.

Reported President Will Make Washington Dry to Protect Soldiers

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—"Drys" and "wets" are agitated over a current report that President Wilson contemplates issuing an order under his war powers prohibiting the importation of intoxicating liquors into the District of Columbia, thus making Washington bone dry. According to the rumor, the President has been impressed by the manner in which the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the Federal district has been disregarded, and has been urged by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to apply the bone dry principle as a measure of protection for soldiers and sailors stationed at camps and stations in and near the capital.

Secretaries Baker and Daniels declined to comment on the report. It was said at the White House offices that nothing of the rumored order was known there. The Department of Justice, which would be a party to any such action by the President, also professed ignorance on the subject.

Under an act of Congress the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages in the District of Columbia has been prohibited since Nov. 1, 1917. The law, however, did not prohibit the importation of liquor for personal use and the liquor houses of the neighboring city of Baltimore have been patronized liberally by residents of Washington since that time.

The arrest of a large number of persons on the charge of bringing liquor into the district without properly labeling the packages was declared by a Justice of the local Supreme Court to have been illegal. Recently there has been a great increase in bootlegging and many arrests and convictions.

GOLD MEDAL TO RED CROSS.

French Academy Honors American Society for Work on War Front.

The Richelieu Grand Gold Medal, originated by Cardinal Richelieu in the time of Louis XIV. and bestowed in the first instance on the Dames de Charité for their work in the hospitals of France, has just been voted to the American Red Cross by the French Academy. The Red Cross Bulletin announces in appreciation of "the immense services rendered the victims of the war in France."

Notification of this action was transmitted to President Wilson, as head of the Red Cross, in a letter written by Ambassador Jusserand in part as follows:

"It is only a token, but it testifies to the gratitude every one of my compatriots feels for the splendid work done by the Red Cross to alleviate suffering and to undo the work of destruction of a relentless enemy."

Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the Red Cross War Council, in acknowledging receipt of the medal, wrote:

"The honor done the American Red Cross by the French Academy in bestowing upon the organization the Richelieu Grand Gold Medal is characteristic of the heart and soul of the French people, who, by their gracious attitude have permitted the American people, through the Red Cross, to give in slight degree an expression of their admiration and affection for the people of France. As I have many times said publicly, so I wish to write to you that however much we may be permitted to do, it can not, at best, be anything more than an expression of gratitude to your people for the incalculable service rendered us many, many years ago, and for their having fought and bled and died for us, as well as themselves, in this war."

CLERGY QUIET GERMANS.

Help the Government to Keep Down the Discontent Over Food.

AMSTERDAM, June 30, (Correspondence of Associated Press.)—The services of the clergy have been enlisted in various parts of Germany to assist in keeping down the growing popular discontent over food difficulties. In the diocese of Münster, Westphalia, the official "War Food Department" has arranged for special lectures throughout the diocese, at which the local priests and clergy will preside and emissaries of the department will furnish information, instruction and arguments designed to answer complaints regarding food scarcity and against the severity of punishments for small transgressions of the food regulations.

There are also many complaints in the country districts over the intricacy and inadequacy of the food regulations, and these complaints generally reach first of all the ears of the parish clergy. The Rhenish Westphalian Gazette, in an editorial approving the scheme to enlist the assistance of the clergy, says:

"The last few months before the harvest will be the most trying time of all. Therefore the Food Department should remain in constant touch with the priests and benefit by their observations among the common people."

LONDON TO MISS ARMY HAT.

American Troops in England to Wear the Overseas Cap.

LONDON, July 29.—The death knell of the sombrero type of hat, which has been a great favorite with American soldiers in England, is sounded in a general order issued by the American Headquarters. The order states that all officers and enlisted men on duty in England will cease to wear the service hat after Aug. 1, and will turn in such hats to the Quartermaster.

The regulation headgear in future will be the "overseas cap," similar to that worn by British aviators.

SAYS ENEMY SPIES BETRAYED SISTER

WANTS THEM PUNISHED

Enemy Alien Editor and a Naturalized American, He Declares, Gave Up American Girl to Austria.

A charge that two New Yorkers, one an enemy alien editor and the other a naturalized American citizen, had betrayed Miss Milada Jaruskova, the American girl sentenced to death as a spy by the Vienna military tribunal, was made yesterday in a formal signed statement by the girl's brother, Slavomir Kratochvil. Today the brother will make a formal complaint to Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker and, submitting his evidence, will ask that both men be treated as spies in the pay of enemy Governments.

Slavomir Kratochvil, who lives at 433 East Sixty-eighth Street, said yesterday that his investigation of the circumstances leading up to the arrest and conviction of his sister had proved to his satisfaction that the editor, whom he named, had known of his sister's mission, and that this man had informed the American. Kratochvil asserted that the latter, who already has been under examination by the Federal authorities in the propaganda inquiry and whose connection with the Germans has been described as that of an advertising and political agent for Count von Bernstorff, then informed the German Government of Miss Jaruskova's activities. In the statement he issued over his signature he said:

"I am accusing ——, the editor of —— (a foreign language newspaper printed in this city), acting as a tool of ——, an advertising and political agent for Count von Bernstorff, has betrayed through —— (the agent) my sister to Germany, and brought about her sentence to death. This editor, having been backed heavily by this man's money, had secured the confidence of some members of the Bohemian National Alliance, and had got access to some inside secrets of its actions. I am going to make this charge in court, where, in addition to the charges already in progress * * * this affair will be prosecuted. I shall insist that these men be tried as spies in this time of war, and sentenced to death like my sister, Milada."

The editor named as instrumental in putting the Austrian secret service on the track of Miss Jaruskova, is an officer in the Austrian reserve, according to Kratochvil, and when war was declared went the first day to the Austrian Consulate and registered as ready for service whenever called. The other man named by Kratochvil was born in Austria, but has sworn allegiance to the United States within the last ten years.

Predicted U-Boat Victory.

Kratochvil said that his sister was born thirty-two years ago in Bohemia, and, like most Czechoslovaks, was intensely anti-Austrian. She came to this country six years ago and obtained a place as a governess, for which she, as a linguist, was well qualified. Mr. Kratochvil said that one of her places of employment was in the family of Countess von Seckondorff, and that while serving there some time before the war she had overheard a conversation that indicated that Germany and Austria looked forward to the war and expected to get a quick victory through "U-boat preparedness."

According to Kratochvil, his sister, performing her duties as companion to the Seckondorff children, unwittingly overheard a dialogue between Johann von Bernstorff, German Ambassador, and Dr. Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, in which von Bernstorff dilated on the prospects of a war and heartened his fellow-Teuton diplomat with glowing predictions about what the submarine would do.

Last February when diplomatic relations with Germany were broken off, and von Bernstorff was ordered to leave the country, Kratochvil asserted, E. V. Voska, Secretary of the Bohemian National Alliance, came to him and said that the Bohemians wished to send some one over with von Bernstorff to endeavor to find out what Germany's dominance of Austria had in store for the Czechoslovaks. Kratochvil said he suggested three men, who were found acceptable, and then he thought that the collection of data on the Czech situation in Austria and, perhaps, in Germany, would be good employment for his sister.

He suggested her to Mr. Voska, who is now a Captain in the Intelligence Service of the army in France, and she was commissioned to go over on the boat. Kratochvil said that Voska obtained the necessary passports, and Miss Jaruskova sailed on Feb. 14, 1917, with the Bernstorff suites. In order that she would not be subjected to embarrassment aboard ship she had decided to pose as strongly pro-German, but arranged to keep Bohemian and Czechoslovak leaders in this city informed of anything of interest to them which might develop on the trip.

When the Bernstorff party arrived at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on Feb. 19 Miss Jaruskova found an opportunity to transmit a message to the Bohemian National Alliance in this city, her brother said. This telegram was to the effect that Bernstorff was continually brooding over the entrance of America into the war, which he regarded as inevitable. It also revealed that the ex-Ambassador was decidedly pessimistic about the outcome of the conflict with America's unlimited resources thrown in against Germany, but, the girl said, he pinned great hope to the work of the imperial propagandists who were still at work. The report also disclosed that Bernstorff then was thinking that when peace overture time came Germany would make her first genuine move through Denmark.

No Word From Sister.

When his sister arrived on the other side, Kratochvil said, his knowledge of her movements became fragmentary. He heard that she had got to Berlin, but no information of how she found Czechoslovak sentiment came to his knowledge. He said yesterday that she probably did not transmit any information to the National Bohemian Alliance, because her instructions were to forward anything she learned to the publisher of another Czechoslovak newspaper.

Last December he first hearr that his sister had been arrested and was awaiting trial as a spy. This information was brought to him by Captain Voska, who returned about that time from France on official business. Captain Voska could give no definite information about Miss Jaruskova, except that she apparently had been arrested in Vienna. Mr. Kratochvil, asked how the Bohemian National Alliance had come to decide to send emissaries abroad, said he believed it had been done to ascertain whether the Bohemians were not chafing under Austrian domination.

When the brother was seen yesterday he was accompanied by Vaclav A. Hajek, formerly an agent of the Federal Department of Justice. Hajek while with the Government obtained the evidence which resulted in the raid on the Philadelphia Tageblatt, and also worked on other important cases. Hajek admitted that he had been at work on the case of Miss Jaruskova, but in advance of the formal complaint the authorities declined to say anything more.

MISS JARUSEK BETRAYED.

Woman Sentenced to Death in Austria Sailed on Ship with Bernstorff.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Miss Milada Jarusek, a Czech girl of New York, reported in dispatches from Zurich to have been sentenced to death by an Austrian courtmartial on a charge of having operated under the instructions of Czech organizations in the United States with the purpose of spying upon Count von Bernstorff, the former German Ambassador, is well known among the Czechoslovak representatives here.

Miss Jarusek has always been much interested in the national movement of her mother country, and returned to Bohemia in 1917 to aid her relatives whom she knew were in great distress. She sailed on the same ship with the German Ambassador, Bernstorff, her departure being known to only a few of her most intimate friends.

It is presumed that some of them inadvertently let the fact of her sailing be known in the presence of a German or Austrian agent. It is considered impossible for the Austrian Government to have indicted her on a charge of espionage unless they had obtained information from this country regarding the circumstances of her sailing.

Officials of the Czechoslovak National Council here say Miss Jarusek's case is a proof of how seriously the Austrian Government is watching the movement for Czech independence and how far, even to shooting women, it is ready to go to intimidate those connected with it.

EX-PREMIERS DEFEND MALVY

Viviani, Briand, and Ribot Assert Accused Minister Did His Duty.

PARIS, July 29.—Ex-Premier Viviani, Briand, and Ribot were heard today at the trial of Louis J. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, charged with holding communications with the enemy.

This was known as Premiers' Day. All three witnesses have been President of the Council when Malvy was head of the Interior Department.

M. Viviani protested against the report that Malvy had been the creature of Caillaux. He said Malvy had always done his duty.

Briand said that when he formed a Cabinet, he intended to exclude Malvy, as he was no personal friend of his and differed in politics, but at the eleventh hour he decided to confide the portfolio of the Interior to Malvy as the best man available.

Ribot testified that during the three years he was the colleague of Malvy, nothing occurred for which the Minister could be reproached.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE FOUND BOMB PLOT

POSED AS A GERMAN BARON

Told Bischoff and His Companions of "Successful" Explosion in du Pont Powder Plant.

Dr. Frederick W. Bischoff, arrested in connection with the plot to blow up the Gould & Eberhardt machine plant at Irvington, N. J., on Friday, was under examination by United States District Attorney Lynch and Department of Justice agents in Newark yesterday for five hours. Although he pleaded guilty on Saturday to violation of the Sabotage act, Bischoff yesterday denied having any part in the plot or the manufacture of the bomb.

During the examination Bischoff saw the Government evidence tending to show his participation in the plot and a dictograph record taken in his room in the Robert Treat Hotel last week. Bischoff maintained he knew nothing of the plot and that it was only by chance he was at the Gould & Eberhardt factory when the Department of Justice agents forced him to tear the lighted fuse from the bomb.

Mr. Lynch said he had learned that the plotters intended also to destroy the plant of the Keyport Engineering Company in Irvington, a short distance from the Gould & Eberhardt plant. Through investigation by a private detective Mr. Lynch says he learned that Bischoff and another man made a trip to the Keyport plant last Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock. They made a survey of the ground, and after locating the power house drew a diagram. The spot where the bomb was to be placed was marked, and the easiest road of approach was also mapped. While on the visit they learned of the guards at the plant and decided not to plant the bomb that night.

They changed their plans and went to the Gould & Eberhardt plant. Diagrams of the power plant of this factory were drawn. Mr. Lynch said the men agreed to place the bomb at this plant on Friday night. It is about 100 yards from the Gould & Eberhardt power house to the Keyport Engineering Company's powder magazine, and in hope that the detonation might destroy the magazine they changed the detonation cap on the bomb.

Preliminary investigation of the case was credited by Mr. Lynch to a private detective who posed as the son of a German Baron and became a companion of Bischoff. He told Bischoff of taking part in a plot for an explosion at the du Pont Powder Works in Haskell, N. J., in January, 1917, causing loss of lives and property.

All the evidence collected by this private detective is now in possession of Mr. Lynch. Letters said to be from men in the military and naval service, which were found in Bischoff's room, are being investigated. They appear to be answers to communications sent by Bischoff and appear to be in code, according to the District Attorney. When Bischoff was taken back to the jail yesterday afternoon he was handcuffed to Harold Montanus, who was arrested in the Standard Airplane Plant in Plainfield as a dangerous enemy alien.

Bruno Reicheit, who was arrested on a charge of conspiracy, will be examined by Mr. Lynch tomorrow. He pleaded not guilty.

William Heineman, who was arrested at the plant with Bischoff, will probably be questioned by Mr. Lynch today. When he was arraigned on Saturday he told the United States Commissioner that he would plead guilty.

ALTERNATIVE TAX ON WAR PROFITS

with reference to tax on seats, berths, &c., was not increased.

Other Decisions Deferred.

"We discussed the matter of transportation of oils by pipe lines, and we did not agree on any proposition, but we are going to return to it later. At present they are taxed 5 per cent. if operating as carriers, and the matter of whether the tax shall apply when carrying for themselves will be investigated further.

"We also took up the question of insurance—life insurance, marine insurance, and casualty insurance. The sentiment of the committee favored increases, but we passed the proposition, to be considered later when we received more information which we have called upon the department to assemble for us.

"Then we took up Title VI., which is the tax on beverages. We did not do anything about beverages at all. We determined to postpone the question of tax on beverages until the very last of all the items, due to the fact that we don't want to withdraw the rates if we have to increase them. A total of 130,000,000 gallons are subject to withdrawal for beverage purposes and 5,000,000 gallons that can only be withdrawn for other purposes. The committee does not know whether it is going to increase the tax or not on account of the temperance proposition arising and the possibility of the country going bone dry, so we did not consider it at all, but left it for the very last.

"That brought us up to Title VII., which is tobaccos. We stopped there and will take up that subject tomorrow."

The sentiment of the Ways and Means Committee is for exempting all soldiers from the taxes on admission tickets to theatres and places of amusement. While the present tax of 10 per cent. on admissions probably will be doubled, soldiers in uniform will be exempted from this tax at theatres and moving picture places. Club dues are scheduled to be doubled also.

BRITISH STRIKERS GO BACK TO WORK

ACCEPT GOVERNMENT PLAN

Winston Churchill Announces That Committee Will Be Named at Once to Study Conditions.

LONDON, July 29.—At a mass meeting today the strikers in the Coventry munition plants decided to resume work immediately.

The meeting passed a resolution accepting the Government's offer of a committee inquiry and agreeing to "resume work forthwith on the understanding that the committee will sit immediately and will include local representatives of the union; also that the Government will withhold its threatened action regarding calling up notices and that no victimization of individuals takes place."

Acting on a resolution passed by their colleagues yesterday, the strikers in Birmingham munition works returned to their places of employment this morning. Although their hostility to the embargo upon skilled labor is unabated, the promise of an inquiry into the situation has reconciled the strikers to the inevitable. Some of them had a hostile reception from the men and women who had remained at work.

It is expected that the action taken by the workers in Coventry and Birmingham will have a soothing effect in other districts where the men have been threatening to lay down their tools.

Winston Spencer Churchill, Minister of Munitions, announced tonight that work having been resumed in the munitions factories in Birmingham and Coventry, he intends to appoint immediately a committee to investigate the labor conditions which rendered the embargo on skilled workmen necessary. Mr. Churchill said the union Advisory Committee had been called to meet Wednesday to name its representatives for the investigation.

BRITISH LABOR PATRIOTIC.

By FRANK DILNOT.

The threatened stoppage of labor by large groups of munition workers in Britain may, in spite of the collapse of the movement, leave a feeling of uneasiness among those who do not know the moods and currents of feeling and inter-acting influences in the labor movement in England. There need be no uneasiness. The workmen of Britain are sound as a bell. From them perhaps more than from any other section of the population there would spring ruin for any government or any set of Cabinet Ministers who showed weakness in the final settlement with Germany. The recent agitation has to be focussed among its surroundings for any kind of accurate judgment about it.

A hundred thousand—if there were as many as that, which I doubt—seems a large number, but it is a very small proportion of the millions now engaged in war work in the country. It is, moreover, a small number compared with the 4,000,000 trade unionists who are the body and backbone of the labor movement. True, if this hundred thousand, relatively small in number, were drawn from what one may call the solid body of the trade unionists, their defection would be a disturbing symptom. I do not think they represent anything like their actual numbers in the solid labor movement.

During the war a great many men have learned the work of munition making, and possibly they have joined unions, and they are pretty certain to include a sprinkling of those Socialists who while not pro-German were decidedly pacifist. These latter would certainly not minimize grievances against the Government or against employers, if those grievances existed. There would, however, certainly be many among the recalcitrants who are long established trade unionists, and it may be asked how does one account for their attitude. One has to have a knowledge of the British workman's psychology to answer that, indeed to find the explanation of the whole of the recent trouble. Probably it was no one factor that was responsible.

A couple of years ago Mr. Weir, (as he then was,) the long-headed Scotsman in charge of munitions north of the Tweed, talking to me in Glasgow during a rebellious mood among some of the Clyde workers, said a thing that is illustrative of the British workingman in general:

"They will not rebel if you conscript them to fight and to give their lives, but there is trouble at once if you try to force them by law to work a certain number of hours or for a certain pay."

That trouble, as all the world knows, has been met by the overwhelming patriotic response of labor as a whole to the country's needs. They are and have for years been working all the hours required for what money is forthcoming—men and women alike.

I attribute the recent trouble to two causes reacting on each other:

1. Tactlessness by authorities or employers in the way certain necessary demands were made.

2. Pacifist sentiment in small circles which took advantage of the situation.

But it is in a survey of the whole situation that onlookers may find not uneasiness, but sure and certain encouragement. The men are going back to work under the Government assertion that they will otherwise promptly find themselves in the army. The significance of their return is not so much in their individual compliance but in the fact that they go back because the country as a whole, including the millions of the labor movement, indorsed the Government's strong assertion. I dare say a patriotic word or two to those who were simply sore had effect, but taken as a body they returned because the working people, that is the overwhelming mass of their fellow-countrymen, would stand no nonsense from them.

The labor movement of Britain intends this war to be ended properly and thoroughly. It intends that, whatever fault it may find with the Government from time to time, there is, one may be sure, not a responsible leader who is not heart and soul in accord with President Wilson's aims. British labor was and is anti-militarist. For that very reason it will not falter or grow weak to the very end.

Of course there are pacifist eddies here and there. I can best illustrate the relative strength of them by saying they were comprised within the Socialist group. That Socialist group numbers—or did number at the outbreak of the war—32,000 out of a total membership in the labor movement of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000. Since the outbreak of war numbers of that 32,000 have shown themselves as sterling patriots as any of their labor colleagues. Mr. Clynes, for instance, now one of Mr. Lloyd George's brilliant lieutenants in the Cabinet, was among them, but broke from their peaceful councils with his indorsement of the war.

The British workingman is in many things slow and conservative, but in a fight he is the stiffest and most stubborn of his race. He will certainly see this thing through. His record to the present time in the war is one which Britain or any country might well be proud of.

QUESTION ROSENFELD IN CHICAGO GEM CASE

Swann Hears That Part of the $256,000 Worth of Jewels Were Disposed of Here.

District Attorney Swann and the Prosecuting Attorney of Chicago, McLean Hoyne, began an investigation yesterday of persons said to be involved in disposing of jewels here that were part of the proceeds of the $256,000 robbery in the Rose-Heller Building in Chicago last January. Mr. Hoyne told the District Attorney that one of four men arrested for the robbery in Chicago, James Driscoll, known also as "English Jimmy," in a confession gave the names of a number of persons here who, he declared, were concerned in disposing of the gems.

Among others mentioned in the case was Sigmund or "Bensey" Rosenfeld. According to the Chicago prosecutor, Driscoll confessed that he had come to New York in March with a part of the stolen jewelry and had met Rosenfeld in a Lexington Avenue café, and had offered to sell him a pearl necklace for $25,000. Rosenfeld, however, had doubted the value of the gems, and had insisted on an examination by John Schepps, said to be an expert on pearls, and who is a brother of Sam Schepps, a witness in the Rosenthal murder case. After Schepps had appraised the pearl necklace, the Chicago prisoner, it was asserted, said Rosenfeld had taken him to a bank and had paid for the necklace.

The District Attorney summoned Rosenfeld and questioned him about this part of Driscoll's statement. Rosenfeld denied purchasing the necklace. He declared he had never seen Driscoll and never had a bank account. Schepps and others will be questioned today. William Simon, a Sixth Avenue jeweler, who was arrested and held on $30,000 bail in the Tombs Court last week on a short affidavit based on information from J. Scott Anderson, an insurance broker, that he had purchased a necklace for $14,000 from Simon, was discharged by the Magistrate yesterday. Simon was rearrested on three indictments returned by the Grand Jury charging receiving stolen goods and grand larceny.

When Simon was arraigned in General Sessions his attorney, Isidore Scherer, succeeded in having bail reduced to $20,000, pending examination today, on the ground that his client had a wife and five children and was a responsible business man. Mr. Scherer said his client denied absolutely the purchase or receipt of any part of the stolen gems and jewelry.

Western Union Pleads Not Guilty.

The Western Union Telegraph Company appeared, through its counsel, Francis R. Stark, before Judge Hand in the Federal District Court yesterday and entered a plea of not guilty to the indictments found against it last Friday by the Federal Grand Jury. The indictments charged violation of Sections 181 and 183 of the United States Criminal Code, which forbid the establishment of private express service and transmission of mail in competition with the United States Government.

WOMEN RELIEVE MEN IN CLERICAL JOBS

Leaving Hotel and Factory Service for Other Work—Domestic Help Serious Problem.

BIG DEMAND FOR MECHANICS

Department of Labor Makes Survey on Conditions Throughout the Country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The Department of Labor issued tonight a summary of labor conditions throughout the United States based on reports received for the week ending July 20, showing that the greatest need for farm laborers is in the Atlantic Coast States, that there is a demand for builders in New England, a demand for mechanics in New York and New England; that machinists are needed throughout the East and on the Pacific Coast and that women are leaving domestic, hotel, and factory service throughout the country to seek clerical positions.

"In New England," says the summary, "along the coast there is some demand for builders, but in the inland towns there is little activity. At New York and Philadelphia building is going on, but the supply of builders at New York is sufficient and Philadelphia has a few carpenters to spare. In the rest of Pennsylvania, in Buffalo, and in the industrial region of northeastern Ohio, carpenters are in great demand. Westward—as far as Iowa—the demand for builders is rather weak.

"At Wilmington, Del.; at Norfolk, and from South Carolina west to Alabama, and Nashville, Tenn., carpenters are in great demand. Norfolk is attracting men from eastern North Carolina, Alabama, and Florida; and Nashville, Tenn., from the entire Southwest. At Kansas City and Omaha building is quite active.

"In the industrial centres of New England and New York mechanics are much in demand. In Chicago and Southwestern Wisconsin the supply is inadequate. At St. Louis there is a sufficient number of men, but at Atlanta, Ga., and Seattle the supply is inadequate. At no place is there a considerable surplus of first-class mechanics.

"Automobile workers and electrical workers are by no means so scarce. There are electrical workers in the West and Southwest available for work elsewhere, with only scattered towns, such as Rockford, Ill., and Muskegon, Mich., calling for such men. Automobile workers are wanted at Seattle, but there is a surplus of them in Missouri, at Wheeling, W. Va., and at other points.

"Munition workers are needed badly at Wilmington, Del., and in Northeastern Ohio. There is a supply available at Knoxville, Tenn., and at Orange and San Antonio, Texas. There is also a certain number at Boston, though munition workers are in demand as close by as Springfield, Mass.

"Machinists are needed throughout the East and on the Pacific Coast. There is a general shortage of boilermakers; only such States as Oklahoma and Arizona report a surplus. Toolmakers, lathe hands, blacksmiths, and iron workers are wanted throughout New England and Pennsylvania, and along the Great Lakes. Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore and Norfolk still need men badly, as do the towns on the North Pacific Coast. At Portland, Ore., there are many hulks in the river, lying there because there are no men to install the machinery.

"In Connecticut, and from Pennsylvania down to Norfolk, common labor is badly needed. Norfolk finds it extremely difficult to get a sufficient number of men from the territory from which it is permitted to recruit them. Labor is extremely scarce in Illinois and Iowa. St. Louis, too, finds men scarce. It is because men are offered higher pay out of town. In the Southern States the situation seems to be much easier. Crops have been laid by, and the farm labor released has supplemented the supply of common labor. The same result has been brought about in West Texas and North Montana, where the crops have been destroyed by a continued drought. In Oregon and Washington the labor supply is still inadequate.

"The greatest need for farm laborers exists in the States along the Atlantic Coast, because men there are attracted by the high wages of the shipbuilding industry. Experienced farmhands are needed in New Hampshire and Minnesota. As the result of a serious drought and of forest fires in Northern Montana, especially near Missoula, there is a surplus of idle farm labor.

"In the Southern and Central States, from Alabama west to Nebraska and Oklahoma, farm help is not in such demand, because the harvest is over and the crops have been laid by.

"Throughout the country women are leaving domestic, hotel and factory work to engage in or to seek clerical positions. Nevertheless the clerical applications cannot be all filled, because employers desire experienced clerks, whereas the majority of the applicants are inexperienced. Factories in New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Ohio need women workers in their factories, but West Virginia has a surplus of factory workers. Now that immigration has ceased during the period of the war, the shortage of women for domestic and hotel work is a serious problem."

NEW WAR STAMP BOOTHS.

Fifth Avenue Association Installs Two at Public Library.

Two new War Savings Stamp booths were opened yesterday in front of the New York Public Library, Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street. One flanks each side of the stairway leading into the building. Both booths were installed by the Fifth Avenue Association, of which Robert Grier Cooke is President. In addressing the rally that took place when the booths were installed, Mr. Cooke said they were erected "for action rather than words."

"The people should bear in mind," said Mr. Cooke, "that the Government is expending enormous sums to carry on the great war. The budget for next year will probably be $22,000,000,000. It is the war of every man and woman in the land, and all should help to win it. Every time a stamp is licked it means one more lick at the Kaiser. The young women in charge have been detailed by the Women's Division of the Manhattan Committee, and will be on duty daily from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M."

After this speech the young women got busy selling stamps. Several hundred dollars' worth were sold in the afternoon.

NEW AIR MAIL RECORD.

Lieut. Bonsal Flies from Philadelphia in 40 Minutes.

A new record in air mail flights was set by Lieutenant Stephen Bonsal yesterday when he flew ninety miles from Bustleton Station, Philadelphia, to Belmont Park in forty minutes. Up to today the record was forty-five minutes, made by Lieutenant C. P. Culver.

Lieutenant Bonsal left Belmont Park for Philadelphia at noon with 200 pounds of mail, the wind being against him, and arrived at Bustleton Station at 1:20 P. M. Leaving there at 1:30 with 175 pounds of mail he returned to Belmont Park at 2:15.

SUBWAY OPENING MAY BE DELAYED

Interborough First Wants Board of Estimate to Approve Pooling System Agreement.

CELEBRATION PLANS GO ON

Hoped That First Train for Round Trip Will Leave Times Square on Evening of Aug. 1.

At a conference yesterday in the offices of the Public Service Commission a partial program was adopted for celebrating on Thursday evening the beginning of through service on the Seventh and Lexington Avenue subways. During the talk Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which will operate the lines, announced that his company would not feel disposed to begin this very important service unless the Board of Estimate had in the meantime approved the agreement forwarded to it by the Public Service Commission providing for the beginning of the pooling system on Aug. 1.

Ordinarily, the board meets only on Fridays, but at its last meeting it adjourned subject to call, so that the desired approval may be obtained tomorrow or Thursday. Under the dual contracts, the pooling plan was not to begin until the tunnel under the East River connecting the Interborough lines in this borough and in Brooklyn was completed, which will probably not be until next March. Now the company receives a preferential of $6,350,000 a year, but for some reason not disclosed it prefers to begin at once a division of the profits, instead of waiting for eight or nine months.

But the making of the program for the celebration went on without regard to Mr. Hedley's statement. It was decided to have the festivities cluster about Times Square. The present plan is to have a train leave the diagonal station at Forty-second Street about 8:45 o'clock in the evening of Aug. 1, bearing officials of the Public Service Commission, the Interborough Company, representatives of various civic organizations, and other prominent citizens yet to be invited, and proceed south to the Battery, where the train will follow the loop and journey north on the tracks of the Seventh Avenue subway to Times Square.

The Interborough Band will then lead a procession to the Hotel Astor, where it is hoped speeches will be made by the Governor and the Mayor, as well as by Chairman Hubbell of the Public Service Commission, Commissioner Whitney, President Theodore P. Shonts of the Interborough, and possibly Oscar S. Straus, who has just retired as Chairman of the commission. William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants' Association, or Alfred E. Marling, President of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside.

Those present at the meeting, besides Mr. Hedley, were James B. Walker, Secretary of the commission, and Daniel L. Turner, Chief Engineer of the commission; Charles T. Gwynne, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; John R. Young of the Merchants' Association, Dr. Paul Henry Zagat, and August Janssen of the Broadway Association, and Vincent Clinton of the Bronx Board of Trade.

The time of the beginning of through service on the "H" lines was set at 8:45 o'clock because it was thought that this would be after the rush of theatregoers and that travel would be light. Between that hour and the early hours of the following morning there will be no express service between Ninety-sixth and Forty-second Streets, because of the need of straightening the tracks. The curves on the inside tracks at Times Square and the diagonal station will be straightened first.

Just how this work will be done has been left to the engineers of the commission, who are completing plans for getting through with it as quickly as possible. Details of the work will probably be made public tomorrow, as well as the schedule of the shuttle trains through Forty-second Street between Times Square and the Grand Central Station. Regret was expressed that because of the short time placed at the disposal of the committee for completing preparations for the opening it would be impossible to have a formal dinner.

GIANTS OVERLOOK OPPORTUNITY TO CUT DOWN PENNANT LEAD OF CHICAGO CUBS

TWO BAD INNINGS FATAL TO GIANTS

McGRAW'S MEN WASTE HITS

Several Promising Situations Come to Naught for Want of a Timely Smash.

Where Pol Perritt usually has one bad inning in a ball game, he had two yesterday, and this state of affairs just about suited the Pittsburgh Pirates, for Pol's second quaky inning, the eighth, enabled the Buccaneers to smash up a 2 to 2 tie and win the game 4 to 2. Wilbur Cooper, whose left-handed pitching has always been a puzzle to the Giants, didn't show his usual sorcery over McGraw's men, for they hit him often enough to get more runs, but didn't make the hits count.

In the first inning, McGraw's lads had Cooper on the run, but they could not strike while the iron was hot. Fletcher and Doyle were on third and second, impatiently anxious to score, but Henry Zimmerman of the Bronx wasn't in sympathy with their ambitions on such a hot afternoon, so he ignobly fanned for the third out. That rosy opportunity did not present itself again, for, outside of the fourth inning, Cooper held the Giants in command.

The torrid pastime was embellished with two fielding gems which made the warm crowd warmer with enthusiasm. Bill Southworth, who roams right field for the Pirates, made a couple of noteworthy grabs, but one in the eighth was downright robbery. Larry Doyle belted a seething liner between centre and right which was on its way to knock the pickets out of the fence when Southworth cut across the meadow, leaped into the air, and nipped the ball with one hand. Ross Young made a star catch in the sixth, which was just the opposite of the Pittsburgher's. Max Carey poked a liner to short right, Young galloping in to pluck it from the top of the grass just before he rolled over in a somersault.

Among those who are here with the Pirates is Wee Tommy Leach, who first got into the game just after the civil war. His work here has been only of an advisory sort, but he stands ready to jump in at shortstop when any of the young fellows are stricken with rheumatism. Wee Tommy has taken up the game again, much to the dismay of his grandchildren.

Pol Perritt's first bad inning was the opening one. Ellam walked, and went down on Bigbee's sacrifice. Carey ballooned to Burns, and Southworth hammered a single to centre, scoring Ellam. Burns let the ball get away from him, and Southworth went to second. Cutshaw smashed a double to left and coaxed Southworth home.

This brace of runs didn't look so big when the Giants got busy in the fourth. Doyle singled to centre, and went to second on Zimmerman's single through shortstop. Jim Thorpe rolled a grounder on the infield lawn, which Cooper grabbed and tossed to McKechnie for a force-out play, but McKechnie muffed the ball, all hands being safe and the bases jammed. Sicking cracked a liner to Ellam, who doubled Zimmerman off second base. McCarty crashed a triple to centre which sent Doyle and Thorpe home. Perritt fouled to Mollwitz for the third out.

The Pirates pried the deadlock apart in the eighth, when it began to look as if the game was going to string along into extra innings. Perritt had settled down after the first inning, and Pittsburgh could do little with him. Cooper paved the way to his own victory with a single to left, and Ellam sacrificed. Doyle threw Bigbee out at first, Cooper going to third. Carey banged a single to right which sent Cooper home, and then Max promptly stole second. Southworth again came to the rescue with a single to centre, Carey romping home with another run.

With one gone in the ninth, Thorpe gave the Giants a little hope when he doubled off the left-field fence. Sicking did nothing to add to the Indians' gayety, for Ellam tossed him out at first. Lew McCarty's efforts to duplicate his triple resulted in a strike-out, and the fun was at an end. The score:

TONEY REPORTS TO GIANTS.

Flock of New Players in Uniform of New York.

Fred Toney, the Cincinnati pitcher recently purchased by the Giants, who refused to come to New York unless he received part of the purchase money, has changed his mind, and reported at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Jay Kirke and Peter Compton, purchased from the Louisville Club of the American Association, also reported to Manager McGraw yesterday.

To make room for these players the Giants will have to release some of their excess talent, and the first to go was Waite Hoyt, who was released to the Newark Club.

The new International League has made peace with the major leagues over the use of the Federal League Park at Harrison for Sunday games. The compromise provides that the International League clubs will play one game there each Sunday and the second game of the double-header will be played by the major league clubs. The Giants and the Cubs will start the new arrangement at Harrison on Sunday.

Johnson Suggests Plan for Holding World's Series.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Closing the major league schedules about Aug. 20 and staging the world's series immediately thereafter is the plan now favored by President B. B. Johnson of the American League, to comply with Secretary Baker's work-or-fight order.

President Johnson tonight sent a bulletin to the American League club owners, asking their approval of the plan, which, it is understood, is also under consideration by the National League.

Closing the season Aug. 20 would leave eleven days in which to play the world's series and still obey Secretary Baker's order to disband Sept. 1. There has been talk of continuing to Sept. 1, or even the day following, which is Labor Day, a legal holiday, but the American League executive is strongly opposed to this. He is in favor of the world's series, but believes it should be held within the time limit placed by the Secretary of War for the suspension of the sport.

If the August closing is agreed upon the Western clubs of the American League will not start the Eastern invasion scheduled for Aug. 14, and the Eastern clubs of the National League will not start West. The days remaining before the official shutdown, Sept. 1, will probably be employed in playing games with clubs in the section.

RED SOX DEFEAT ST. LOUIS.

Babe Ruth Pitches Boston to 3 to 2 Victory Over Browns.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 29.—Boston bunched three of its seven hits off Sothoron in the fifth inning, and, aided by Demmitt's error, won today's game from St. Louis, 3 to 2. Ruth gave four hits, three of which came in the sixth and netted the Browns their two runs.

YANKS FAIL TO HIT WITH MEN ON BASES

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 29.—The Yankees took another header this afternoon when they opened a five-game series with the Tigers, failure to hit in the pinches again being an outstanding fault of the Huggins machine. The New Yorkers outhit the home team and Mogridge limited Jennings's troupe to six hits, but even this combination of efficient work did not prove a winner. The final out found the Yankees trailing on the slim section of a 3-to-2 score.

The batting of Dauss, rather than his pitching, was responsible for this latest setback. The Yankees bunched two hits off Dauss in three different innings and earned both runs which they scored. An error presented the Tigers with their first run and some sensational outfielding by Walker kept the Yankees from adding to their total.

Lamar started the Yankees on their scoring way in the first inning and in the same frame made a misplay which handed the Tigers a run. Caldwell's infield out sent Lamar to second and Pratt scored him with a single past Bush after Baker had popped out.

With one down in the Tigers' half of the first Jones singled to left and Veach hit a long fly to centre. Lamar dropped it and Jones reached second. Mogridge walked Kavanagh, filling the bases, and Harper's hoist to Caldwell permitted Jones to score.

The deadlock continued until the home half of the fourth when two runs were scored. With one out Coffey beat out a slow roller to Baker and when Stanage popped to Peck for the second out the danger appeared over. Dauss chased Coffey home with a triple to right centre, and Bush duplicated the hit, sending Dauss in with what proved to be the deciding run.

In the Yankees' sixth inning, Pratt hit to left field for two bases and scored on Pipp's single. In the eighth the Yankees had an opportunity to tie the game, but let it slip away from them. After Lamar had been set down, Caldwell reached first on an error by Kavanaugh and Baker's single sent Slim around to third. Pratt tried to squeeze Caldwell home, but hit the ball too hard and Kavanaugh got it back to the plate in time to retire the runner. With Baker on second and Pratt on frist, Pipp made his bid for victory and Walker came through with his great catch.

BETZEL'S HIT BREAKS TIE.

St. Louis Downs Robins in Twelve-Inning Game, 4 to 3.

A solid blow to centre field by Betzel in the twelfth inning of the game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Robins at Ebbets Field yesterday chased Rogers Hornsby across the plate with the run that gave the Cardinals the conflict by the score of 4 to 3. The teams previously had battled along deadlocked at 3 all for six innings. Starting the twelfth, Hornsby singled to right, went to second on McHenry's sacrifice, and reached third while Olson was throwing out Bronkie. From this station the Cardinal shortstop registered with the winning run on Betzel's rap to centre.

Manager Robinson sent Jimmy Archer in to bat for Rube Marquard in the Robin' twelfth in an effort to change the complexion of the game, but the end was not attained. The veteran Jimmy received an encouraging reception from the handful of fans, but was thrown out by Hornsby at first. It was Archer's first appearance in a Brooklyn uniform since he joined the club. Johnston and Olson, following him, also died easy.

Rube Marquard, taking a day off from his naval duties, pitched in excellent form, and his teammates batted heavily behind him, reaching Gene Packard for thirteen safe wallops. The majority of these hits were wasted, however, and errors by Mike Doolan and Zach Wheat contributed to the Rube's downfall.

FAVORITES LOSE AT EMPIRE CITY TRACK

It was Red Cross Day at the Empire City track yesterday, and the whole of the gate receipts went to enrich the fund for taking care of the wounded soldiers. The Red Cross, by the way, was not the only beneficiary from a good afternoon's sport, as for the second time within a week every favorite was beaten, and the public money was handed over to the layers of odds with great regularity.

F. D. Weir's Hendrie, carrying top weight of 126 pounds, was considered the good thing for the Red Cross Handicap, but, after breaking with the others, he refused to go on until the rest of the field had obtained a good lead. Molesworth, who had the mount on the favorite, persevered with him after this, but the stern chase was hopeless, and he finished absolutely last. The lightly weighted Rhine Maiden made the pace to the head of the stretch, where E. Sande brought up the Cleveland Stable's Dorcas. The tussle was a short one, for Dorcas was full of running, and at the finish was under wraps to win by a length and a half. Flittergold was third, a length further back.

Though only four started for the Melrose Selling Stakes at a mile and a sixteenth, it produced a good contest, with the Nevada Sable's Slippery Elm in command nearly all the way. The Cleveland Stable was trying for a double, with Whimsy as the candidate. Byrne, who had the mount, started his run a little too late, and, though Whimsy made up a lot of ground in the stretch, he just failed to reach Slippery Elm.

The biggest surprise of the day came in the fifth race, at about six furlongs, in which Manganese was a strong favorite. R. F. Carman's Blazeaway, a brilliant-looking son of Waterboy, followed the hot pace set by Langden, and came away in the stretch to win by a length and a half. Odds of 15 to 1 were obtainable against the winner.

NIPPON NET STARS AGAIN SHOW SKILL

ANDERSONS ARE DEFEATED

With an entry rather more representative of the younger net stars than of the older players, the tournament to decide the Metropolitan tennis championships began on the courts of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge yesterday. Forty-five players were entered for the singles event, and after looking over the draw it was remarked by one follower of the game that the two Japanese stars, Ichiya Kumagae and Seiichiro Kashio, appeared to have the best chance of meeting in the final round, which would thereby be a repetition of the challenge round of the New York State championship at Utica.

The two Japanese are in opposite halves of the draw, and on paper each in his respective section looks to be the outstanding star. The most formidable rival for Kumagae will probably be Elliott Binzen, who is now playing with the Pelham Bay Naval Training Camp sailors, many of whom are entered for the Metropolitan title.

Although the tournament began only yesterday, there were several surprises recorded during the afternoon's play. One of the best matches of the second round brought into action two of the most proficient younger players—Vincent Richards, the national boys' champion, and Frederick C. Anderson, the 19-year-old Brooklyn star, who only recently achieved the Eastern New York singles title. Richards, although making his first appearance in tournament play after a long illness, was able to command his strokes so well that Anderson was defeated in a three-set match at 4—6, 6—2, 6—4. Anderson was more severe than his rival, but he was hardly as accurate, and this latter fact spelled the difference between victory and defeat.

Elliott Binzen made his appearance in the tournament during the late afternoon and did so well that he defeated one of the steadiest players that the game has ever produced, G. A. L. Dionne, the score being 6—3, 3—6, 6—3. Binzen never had any patience with the long rallies, and for the most part he came to the forecourt and volleyed and smashed his way through to victory.

The work of Kumagae was watched with keen interest. Never before in this country has the little Japanese played such a determined net game as yesterday. Opposed by George S. Groesbeck, he allowed his rival only one game in two sets, this the first in the opening clash. Knowing full well that he was in command of the situation, Kumagae cast caution to the winds and played a game that savored more of the California type of tennis, as exemplified by William M. Johnston, than it did of the baseline style so characteristic of the Orientals. Kumagae took the match as an opportunity to perfect the net game which he evidently hopes will stand him in good stead in the national championships.

The other Japanese, Kashio, came through a second-round match without difficulty, defeating Fred C. Baggs at 6—2, 6—4. Accuracy and stamina were features of this contest, the Japanese being amazingly free from errors when playing from any position on the court.

SIX TIE IN GOLF TOURNEY.

As a result of the ruling that scores under 68 will count only as 68, six members of the New York Newspaper Golf Club tied for first place in the qualifying round for the August tournament at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday. They are R. W. Maclauchlan, 87, 22—65; C. F. Laux, 84, 18—66; David Hall, 81, 15—66; Leroy Thompson, 86 20—66; E. B. Davis, 83, 16—67, and O. E. Butler, 82, 15—67. They will play off the tie tomorrow.

The New York newspaper golfers will have one of their out-of-town gatherings next Monday and will play over the Wykagyl links. On that occasion members will take part in a bestball fourball affair.

Furnishes Surprise in Columbus Grand Circuit Meeting.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 29.—With the free-for-all pace and the Elks' Home 2:05 pace, purse $3,000, as feature events, the largest Monday crowd in years witnessed the opening card of the midsummer Grand Circuit meeting here today. Miss Harris M. did not start in the free-for-all pace, which took some of the zest out of the race, but William furnished a surprise when he defeated Single G.

William was in rare form, and paced the first heat in 1:59¾ in an easy finish. The other two miles were just a fraction slower than 2:00.

A shower in midafternoon delayed racing for nearly an hour and slowed up the track.

The 2:09 trot and the 2:05 Elks' Home pace were completed after the rain, but the 2:17 trot went over to Tuesday intact.

Heir Reaper had to go an extra heat to defeat the 2:09 trotters, a bad break in the stretch causing him to lose the third heat.

HOLD RICE FOR FRAUD.

Self-Styled Broker Is Put Under $15,000 Bail on Stock Charge.

George Graham Rice, whose right name is said to be Jacob Simon Herzig, who has served several prison terms for crimes involving fraudulent financial transactions, was again taken into custody last night, this time on a Federal warrant which charges that he has been using the mails to defraud. For some time Rice has been in business at 27 William Street, where he has a staff of 125 persons, his payroll amounting to about $2,300 a week. His arrest last night was the outcome of his alleged efforts to defraud an Ohio farmer from whom he obtained about $700 in cash and a $100 Liberty bond. The money was turned over to Rice with instructions to buy ten shares of common stock of the American Car and Foundry Company. According to the Government, Rice made no acknowledgment of any sore after receiving the money.

Rice was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock at 9:30 o'clock last night, and bail was fixed at $15,000 and the hearing fixed for Aug. 5. A surety company went bail for Rice and he was released. Rice was arrested at his office in William Street by United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy. Assistant United States District Attorney Ben A. Matthews represented the Government in the arraignment, and asked that the bail be fixed at $15,000, which was opposed by lawyers for Rice, who asserted that the amount was excessive. Mr. Matthews told the Commissioner that there are several similar complaints against Rice and that bail should be high. Commissioner Hitchcock agreed with him.

It was said last night that Rice had served three terms in prison, the first at Elmira, the second in Sing Sing, and the last one, which he finished in 1912, in the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island. One of the Post Office Inspectors said that Rice informed him last week that he had 53,000 customers, and that his office expenses alone amounted to about $200,000 a year. Rice gave his occupation as that of broker. His home address is 14 East Sixtieth Street. Rice has been sending through the mails a publication called The Industrial and Mining Age, to prospective customers in all parts of the country. The man named in the complaint as the person whom Rice sought to defraud is R. W. Hartman of Mansfield, Ohio.

SEARCH FOR SAFE ROBBERS.

Police Put Experts on Trail of Gang Operating Here.

Safe robberies by means of explosives have become so numerous within the last ten days that Police Inspector Cray took these cases from the precinct detectives yesterday and sent out squads of his experts to round up every suspected "safe-cracker" in the city. It is believed that gangs of burglars and safe-breakers from other places have invaded Manhattan, prepared to make big hauls of loot, and then get away quickly. Three of the six safe explosions were close to the old "deadline" of Inspector Byrnes's time—Fulton Street, in the wholesale leather district east of Park Row, and south of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The third of these robberies occurred on Friday night in the leather warehouse of Abraham Stein at 97 Gold Street, near Frankfort Street. The safe was drilled and blown open with nitroglycerine, and among the valuables taken were $500 worth of Liberty bonds, $328 in War Savings Stamps, and $164 in cash. Cray has ordered all suspects to be taken to headquarters for questioning and possible identification in the Fingerprint Bureau. Detectives Coffey and Kenny arrested John Parisi of 78 Catherine Street on a charge of suspicion of being implicated in the Stein robbery. He was held in $1,000 bail.

SKIPPER OF LIGHTER DROWNS

The skipper of the barge Ram, a Scandinavian whose name has not been ascertained, lost his life yesterday morning when his craft, with 400 tons of copper ore, valued at $20,000, sank off Pier 9, Van Brunt Street, Brooklyn. The barge, owned by C. F. Harms Company, 17 State Street, Manhattan, had loaded the ore from a Brazilian steamship on Sunday. The craft was made fast alongside the steamship and the continual pounding of its side against the steel hull of the steamship caused the barge to collapse and sink in thirty feet of water.

When the barge went down Patrolman Michael Downey of the Hamilton Avenue Station saw the Captain's hand sticking out above the water and notified the Harbor "A" squad and steps were taken to extricate the body from the cabin of the lighter.

REPORT VILLARD STOCK SOLD

President of Evening Post Corporation Has No Statement to Make.

It was reported yesterday that Oswald Garrison Villard, President and a Director of the corporation that owns The New York Evening Post, had disposed of his stock in that organization to be certain of his associates in the newspaper.

Asked when the new management would be ready to make a statement as to the change in ownership, Emil M. Scholz, publisher of The Post, was reported as saying that the plans for the conduct of the newspaper had not been completed, but that it was certain that the publication would continue under practically the same editors and business management.

Mr. Villard, when asked last night whether he had sold his stock in The Post, asserted that he had nothing to say.

The final contests in the other three classes all ended in the first round. In the 110-pound division Sam Nable and L. Zabrinsky, both Clark House A. A. boxers, were the contestants and this bount was halted in the opening round when Zabrinsky broke his right wrist. A. Martin scored over C. Jackson in the first round for the 125-pound prize, and in the 118-pound class Walter Gilday of the Union Settlement A. C. defeated H. Brown, Clark House A. A. in one round.

BRITTON KNOCKS OUT RYAN.

Former Champion Has Little Trouble Stopping Opponent.

Jack Britton, former welterweight champion, last night easily disposed of Willie Ryan of New Brunswick in their scheduled eight-round bout at the Armory A. A. of Jersey City. Britton completely outclassed his less experienced foe, and just played with the New Brunswick lad from the start. In the third round Britton had Ryan staggering helplessly about the ring. In the fourth Britton again had Ryan staggering like a longshoreman, and this time the New Brunswick lad's handlers threw in the sponge.

In the opening eight-round contest Joe Mooney of this city and Johnny Drummie, a Jersey City lightweight, furnished a sterling bout. Drummie landed cleaner and oftener and was entitled to the laurels.

'AMERICA'S ANSWER' STIRS WAR SPIRIT

"America's Answer" was shown on the screen of the George M. Cohan Theatre last night, first in flaming words symbolizing the spirit of the nation at war and then in the physical forces of men and munitions and vast constructions that make the answer the practical, powerful thing it is on the fields of France. The occasion was the first exhibition of the United States Government's second feature film of the war, presented by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information. The purpose of the motion picture is to set before Americans here what Americans over there are doing and to bring the war as a living, familiar fact home to those who are fighting it on this side of the Atlantic, so that they may more actively realize their part in it.

For accomplishing this purpose "America's Answer" is competent. It accomplished it last night with those who went to the Cohan Theatre. Not a man and not a woman in the crowd that filled the seats failed to feel the pull of the war, the urging of its influence, the sense of participation in it. It was not only that the music, tableau, and almost every scene of the film brought forth cheers, but that the war seemed actually to come close in its full meaning for everyday life and to explain itself in many of the practical details that are needed for the stimulation of those who buy bonds and save food and spend their energies in a thousand occupations imperatively essential.

This success of "America's Answer" is due to a combination of factors. First, of course, there is the film itself, with its vivid pictures of Americans at their war work in France. And the titles of the film, written by Kenneth C. Beaton, support the pictures from beginning to end. Then, to be counted among the principals in importance, is the staging of the film arranged by S. L. Rothapfel, who prepared a patriotic setting in which the pictures could be shown that in itself stirred the enthusiasm of last night's spectators and arranged a tableau vivant entitled "Columbia" that remained clear in the mind after the last of the motion pictures had been shown.

Mr. Rothapfel also prepared a musical accompaniment for the film, that added to the effect of whatever was on the screen, and followed a stirring prelude composed for the occasion by Hugo Riesenfeld. To begin the exhibition, Percy Hemus and his fifty or more singing sailors from the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." And in the intermission, George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, made an address, in which he explained the purpose of the film, and urged Americans over here to make supreme and unselfish efforts in support of their own on the other side.

"America's Answer," the film, is a supplement to "Pershing's Crusaders," which was the first Government picture and emphasized especially the scope and details of the war in America. The present production takes Americans across the ocean and shows what is being done over there, not only by the men who fight, but by those who build bridges and railroads and big plants, by those who cut down trees and assemble locomotives and send supplies to the soldiers at the front, by those who minister to the needs of the fighting men, the men and women of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Salvation Army, and the other relief organizations.

Reading newspapers and official reports one is apt to get the impression that there is not much to the war, except actual fighting and, when hearing that the combatant force is composed of what seems a surprisingly low percentage of the million and more men in France, to wonder what the rest of the men are doing. "America's Answer" is the answer to such people. It shows the vast reach of the war behind the lines and the definite and indispensable work being done by those who do not bear guns.

Scenes representing this side of the war may not be as exciting as those made in sight of No Man's Land, but they command the interest of spectators and stir their emotions because they are a revelation of America's energy and ability and a demonstration of this country's contribution to the cause of the Allies. When one sees a picture showing the construction of a port that might have been made in times of peace anywhere along the Atlantic or Pacific, he is thrilled, because he knows that the port was not made on the Atlantic or Pacific in peaceful days, but in France by American engineers and American workmen who had to run the gauntlet of submarines and with materials that had to be shipped across miles of menacing water. And so there is a picture of the assembling of a giant locomotive that might have been made in the Baldwin Locomotive Works—but it wasn't. It was made in France, where the locomotive will roll toward Berlin. The lumberjacks seen so energetically cutting down trees are not working in the forests of Maine or Oregon, but in the woods of France. And so all of the work that the war demands receives a glory given it by the war.

The film goes into many of the details of camouflaging that are interesting in themselves, and the scenes of activity around the hospitals, huts, and kitchens of the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and the Salvation Army at the end of its first part.

The second part begins with marching men, long columns of them going toward the front, and from then on there is more of the war as it is most familiar. A clear idea of life in the trenches is shown, how the men eat, how they dress, how their clothes are sterilized, how they play—and, finally, how they fight. Several views of No Man's Land and the men in the trenches just this side of it take the spectator as far as he can go, and a few flashes of big guns in action supply the dramatic booming with which the film comes to an end. The excitement of the picture is heightened by the introduction of several scenes from "Flying With the Marines," the sensational aviation film exhibited recently at the Rivoli.

One must not try to get more than the suggestion of an idea of what "America's Answer" is from what has been written. One must first want to know something about the war, desire to be informed, not always excited, but seriously and intelligently informed, of what the war in all of its departments is really like—and then one must go to the George M. Cohan Theatre and get the important things the film can give. To those who approach the film in this mind and spirit, "America's Answer" will come with all of its force.

George Creel, in his address, said in part:

"The picture that is being shown tonight represents one phase of America's fight for public opinion. It is a fight that is being made not only in the United States, but in every country in the world. Through the written word, the spoken word, the motion picture, the poster, and the sign board, we are carrying the message and meaning of democracy to all peoples, preaching to them the justice of our cause, the certainty of our victory, and the great truth that this victory contains no benefit for us that may not also be enjoyed by the whole world.

"In the rush of preparation there have been failures, but on the whole a great task has been greatly discharged. Let us continue to be impatient with inefficiency, but when we have to replace a defective brick, do not let it be used as an excuse for tearing down the whole structure of achievement.

"There is betrayal in the question: 'When do you think the war will end?' for it argues weariness and weakness. It cannot end and will not end and cannot end until it ends right. Any peace is premature that is no more than a truce or a breathing spell. And just as our soldiers are beating back the German drive in France, so must we beat back the German peace drive in America."

This year's show at the Hippodrome, it was announced yesterday, will be known as "Everything," and the house will reopen for the season during the last week of August. The new show is in three acts and fourteen scenes, originated and staged, as in previous years, by R. H. Burnside. The music and lyrics have been written by a group of writers, among whom are John Philip Sousa, Irving Berlin, John L. Golden, William Jerome, Harry Tierney, Percy Wenrich, and Raymond Hubbell. The producing manager will again be Charles B. Dillingham.

Those who will appear in "Everything" will include De Wolf Hopper, Harry Houdini, Charles T. Aldrich, Belle Story, Bert Levy, Tom Brown's Clown Band, Arthur Geary, tenor, and Bluch Landolf, the clown who established himself in last season's Hippodrome show. There will also be a large troupe of dancers, headed by Desiree Lubowska and Gerda Guido, the latter a Danish dancer new to this country.

The house is being elaborately redecorated over the Summer, and rehearsals have been in progress for several weeks at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory.

Marguerita Sylva brought her well trained voice to the variety stage yesterday afternoon as the headline attraction of a good Summer program at the Palace. Her numbers, for the most part, were of the popular variety. The only other new number on the bill was "The Land Over Yonder," an interesting but rather wordy war playlet, by Peter B. Kyne, the short story writer.

Among the established entertainers who returned were Trixie Friganza, Edwin George, a perfect hot weather entertainer; Leo Beers and pianologue, and Dooley and Sales.

AMERICA IN AERIAL WARFARE.

After three and a half years of war the British Government realized the necessity of creating an Air Ministry to control aviation. This organization, says Major Gen. W. S. Brancker, who has charge of the Department of Equipment, "supplies the army "and navy with airplanes and pilots, "and, in addition, maintains an independent force." In England, he explains, there is not the anomalous situation of one branch of the aviation service competing with the other for production and equipment. Co-ordination, indeed, solves all war problems. General Brancker urges the United States to follow England's example.

Under the American dual system the army is in competition with the sea service to obtain the finished product, the airplane. The status of the Production Board is not well defined. Its head does not yet know what his powers are. Only a few days ago the President signed a bill providing for the Aircraft Corporation, of which the Government will be majority stockholder. The relation of the Corporation to the Aircraft Production Board will be similar to that of the Emergency Fleet Corporation to the Shipping Board. Undoubtedly this new agency will direct and stimulate production, which only now, after nearly sixteen months of war, is gathering speed. It lags very far behind the personnel of the Aviation Corps, which exceeds the complement of the United States Army before the war.

A long step forward has been made in authorizing the Aircraft Corporation. We may soon be able to report the "peak of production," a phrase coined by Secretary Baker when the United States was accomplishing next to nothing in building motors and planes and did not have a single American battle machine on the western front—and that was not very long ago. There still remains the reform urged by General Brancker. What rational objection can be made to the creation of an Air Ministry to relieve the hard-working and overburdened Army and Navy Departments of aerial problems? The rank and file of the Army Aviation Corps now include 115,000 men. There were less than 100,000 in the land forces before the war. Appropriations for aviation have exceeded $1,000,000,000. Scores of thousands of airplanes must be built to secure and keep for America and her allies control of the air in France. In the year ended June 30, 1918, the British Royal Air Force brought down 4,102 enemy planes and lost 1,121 machines. It is so obvious that military aviation is too big and complicated to be a mere appendage to the Army and Navy Departments that opposition to turning over aerial problems to a new department is incomprehensible. Mr. Baker and Mr. Daniels should rejoice to be divested of their responsibility, and if they are practical men they will indorse and support the proposal for a so-called Air Ministry. In this matter, as in all others relating to the prosecution of the war, no time is to be lost in doing the right and the indispensable thing.

The British are making a remarkable record in carrying the war by bombing raids into the enemy's country. The Germans no longer have illusions about the menace of which they formerly had a monopoly. One of their recent reports admitted that in June thirty-three air attacks were made by the Allies, of whom the British were the most active, upon German towns and cities: twelve against industrial districts in Alsace-Lorraine and Luxemburg, four against Dillingen and Saarbrücken territory, and the others along the Rhine. The British are incessantly bombing such places as Offenburg, Thionville, Roulers, Bruges, and Zeebrugge, but every attack has a military object. In this work it will be some time before the Americans can join in force, and their aid is particularly wanted in attacks upon ammunition dumps and factories, railway junctions, and troop concentrations. An Air Ministry or department would greatly facilitate the carrying out of all plans to harass and destroy the enemy. Eventually, as General Brancker points out, war in the air could be extended to all the principal fortified and garrisoned towns of Germany and as far as Berlin, where a lesson in the war-making powers of the Allies is greatly needed and would have a salutary effect.

Co-ordination between America and her allies in military aviation would be a most desirable step beyond the creation of an American Air Department. They now often work at cross-purposes. England at this moment wants high-power Liberty motors for bombing planes already built for them, but the order cannot be filled because, so the War Office is informed, engines must be sent to General Pershing for battle planes. Yet England stands ready to supply him with battle planes sufficient for present requirements. If our Government would meet England half way, her bombing planes could be immediately increased for raids into Germany and General Pershing could have his combat planes.

Co-ordination is a crying need if the Allies are not to waste time and effort in prosecuting the war against a Power that never fails, with its manifestly inferior resources, in setting the pace in efficiency. In no branch of military operations is co-ordination more necessary than in that of war from the air.

FUTILITIES OF CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE.

In the general impulse to creative activity and scientific progress which has resulted from the war the neutral nations have not been exempt, and being free from war's worst burdens they might be expected to contribute something notable to the progress of the race. How painful, then, it is to read that a distinguished Scandinavian, Dr. Hindhede, has established the fact that man can get fat without eating fats! Those misguided individuals who want to know how to get fat are few, and material for the gratification of their strange desire is ready to the hand of most of them. That men could continue to live, work, think, and maintain at least a minimum of health with very little fat in their diet was already established, for in vast regions of half-fed Europe they have been doing that for months and years past; no Scandinavian researches were needed to establish that.

If Dr. Hindhede and his colleagues among neutral scientists wish to devise something that will bring real solace to the world after the war is over, let them devise some diet on which anybody can get thin. The mere verification of suspicion that whatever you eat or do not eat you will still have to let out your belt, may prevent some needlessly painful dietetic penances, but it does nothing to alleviate the agonies of the adipose.

THE FISCAL YEAR'S TRADE.

Considering the embargoes upon trade, it is not surprising that the fiscal year which ended with June shows a decrease in the aggregate of our exports and imports from $8,949,000,000 in 1917 to $8,874,000,000 in 1918. Even the smaller total shows a world's record above any other country. The change in trade is greater than the total indicates. Imports increased $287,000,000, to $2,946,000,000, and exports decreased $362,000,000, to $5,928,000,000. A credit balance of nearly three billions on merchandise movement is too great to endure. The world could not send us either goods or gold or securities to balance the account permanently. We probably shall have a normal credit balance after the war, succeeding to England's leadership in that respect. As we are a larger population, it may be that we can rely upon a billion excess of exports. So great and sudden have been the changes of this war that in its brief span we have left our era of exclusiveness further behind us than otherwise we could have done in a generation, or even two.

There is little in this great accomplishment to make us boastful. Our record of foreign trade at its largest loses impressiveness when calculated in proportion to our wealth or our population. Moreover, the reason of our excess of exports counsels us to modesty. Not the excellence nor cheapness of our goods, nor our salesmanship, explains it. England's necessity and our loyalty to our ally are the explanation. Our export increases have been mostly war goods, and foodstuffs which England could not supply for herself because she has put fourfold more defenders of democracy into the trenches than we have done as yet. Small and beleaguered as England is, she nevertheless imported in excess of five billion dollars' worth of goods in the fiscal year ended with June a year ago, and for the half year ended with June of this year has imported at a rate exceeding that, and exceeding also our exports. It is a marvel that England has balanced the account, last year with gold and this year with credit. Even that is a small accomplishment compared with the fact that England's exports have actually increased during the war, and are far above normal. For our fiscal year ended with June in 1917 England's exports increased nearly $100,000,000 over 1916, and this calendar year also the record is above 1916 for the half which has elapsed. Marvelous as were Germany's preparations for conquering world commerce, they shrink when compared with the gigantic efforts of England to fight with one hand and to manufacture and export with the other, under the discouragement of war weariness. The true supermen are not the Germans, but the "frivolous" French and the "decadent" British—as none know better than the Germans now. We may rightly be proud of our Anglo-Saxon stock, but the present time is not favorable for boasts about the magnitude of our trade.

In one respect only may we indulge ourselves in self-virtue. So far as we have stinted ourselves that our allies might be better fed we can boast of our exports of eatables to them. The Food Administration informed us yesterday that our voluntary limitation of consumption of wheat has released for the benefit of our friends 200,000,000 pounds of wheat, 150,000,000 pounds of meat, and 50,000,000 pounds of sugar. That is for the period from October, 1917, to the end of this month. Speaking in London, Mr. Hoover declared that the food crisis was passed, and that we may relax our economies. Therefore it is permissible to boast that our year's exports of breadstuffs passed every record. No country ever before exported $633,309,485 worth of breadstuffs, and it is only a few years ago that we were told that we were in a poor way of feeding ourselves. This great total of export of foodstuffs was made up in a manner worth notice. The increase of flour in barrels was ten million, and in dollars from $93,198,474 to $244,861,140. There was a decrease of 20,000,000 bushels of corn, and 115,000,000 bushels of wheat. So far as these quantities are in dollars, they are subject to discount on account of the difference of prices. This appears strongly in the exports of cotton. They decreased from 5,947,165 bales to 4,528,844, but increased in value from $543,100,542 to $588,983,454. The total of agricultural exports, including meat and dairy products, rose from $1,719,616,415 to $2,294,470,947, an increase of a billion dollars over 1916.

We have no cause to be ashamed of our record as fighters, but as feeders and clothers of the defenders of democracy we may claim primacy without fear of offense or denial. It is possible that by some miracle of bravery our allies might have beaten the Huns in the trenches, but they could not have done so if we had not fed them, and deprived ourselves to some extent that we might do so. But here again there is cause for modesty. Has not Mr. Hoover told us that the sole cause of scarcity for the world was the increase of our consumption over our own pre-war standards, and that if we only ate what used to satisfy us there would be cheapness and plenty? We eat too much sugar and meat, despite what we have done in the way of discouragement of that form of first aid to the doctors and undertakers. Proud as we may be of our self-denial, it remains true that we might easily have spared a few hundred millions more of agricultural products.

TWO IN A TOWER.

For too long a time the Kaiser and Karl Rosner, his bard and trumpeter, had ceased to be in the midst of the film fight. July 15 they reappeared. With his usual benignity, the Kaiser informed his soldiers that they were to have the happiness of fighting while he looked on. The wonted lyric order went forth: "Let the troops hear that, "in these grave hours, I am near and "my wishes go with them." A General Staff officer promulgated an order on an order, communicating to the delighted German tribesmen that the Kaiser was going to do himself the pleasure of watching them and sent them his regards. "His Majesty calls "to them, 'With God for the Kaiser "'and the Empire,'" which is an anticlimax. The Kaiser should have been final, not penultimate, in the procession of deities. The Kaiser had signed this order on "a shaky table," no doubt with a firm hand, by a pocket lantern's "flickering light." Romantic Rosner must have been thinking of "The Burial of Sir John Moore."

The prelude is over. The epic begins. Rosner tells how he starts with the Kaiser to see "the Kaiser's battle":

> Lightless in the darkness the motor cars rattle;
> In one sits the Kaiser, two Adjutants with him;
> Serious the Kaiser's look, silently he gazes
> Deep into the night,
> Thinking of the battle
> With all its Schrecklichkeit,
> To break forth like blazes
> In a brace of hours.

Men, guns, munition wagons, and time pass. It is still dark. Suddenly the dithyrambic Rosner illuminates the landscape:

> Out of the heavens and hovers high.
> Then it falls like a shower of stars and dies.
> 'Tis a lightshell
> O'er the French trenches.

Childe Wilhelm to the Dark Tower came. A tower of safety on a bosky height in the Rheims region. The table shakes. Does the Kaiser believe in omens? The pocket lantern burns dimly, lighting feebly on the shaky table the Kaiser's watch, which goes "Tick, tick, tick!" ironically recalling the financial condition of the Empire. Karl and the cannonade begin:

> A vast arc
> Of the heavens seems
> To move convulsively,
> As if struck by a wrathful kraken,
> And a hidden light is shaken
> Out of the veiling clouds of night.

Never has Karl been so colossal-epic. It would be superfluous to divide into free assorted hunks the majestic momentum of his song:

> The whole horizon is instantly awake. Thousands of cannon roar, and, as far as the eye can see, the torn night is hurled out of her sleep, and over all the storm of smoke and rage is thrown. The gigantic-mouthed cannon pour out sheaths of flame, and in the distance the iron seed is sown. The heavens shudder in their wrath.

Famous! Which is more terrible, Karl or Kaiser, the singer or the song? Somehow, these Two in a Tower recall Heine's description of Immanuel Kant, sallying forth from Königsberg with his umbrella and his faithful servitor, Lampe, to storm the battlements of heaven. How much braver the philosopher than the Emperor!

It is more than enough to make the heavens shudder with wrath to know that this beautiful poem was "held up" for eleven days in Berlin, the "hard and hammering events" which the Kaiser was to inspect from his tower having made his troops the hammered and not the hammer.

THE MOONEY CASE.

Mr. Frank P. Walsh of Industrial Commission fame, and not wholly unknown in this community, is now Chairman of the National War Labor Board. He was one of the speakers at a mass meeting held in Chicago Sunday to protest against the sentence of death pronounced upon Thomas J. Mooney, found guilty of being concerned in the throwing of bombs upon the occasion of the preparedness parade in San Francisco on July 22, 1916. From the press report of the proceedings of this Chicago meeting, we make this extract:

> Mr. Walsh, while predicting that the reprieve granted Mooney Friday by Governor Stephens of California would result in a pardon, demanded that the President send troops into California to free the prisoner in the event that the Governor does not pardon him.

In the present state of our armed land forces, we have no doubt that the President could send to California troops enough to make certain the release of Mooney. But if he were to refer to the law adviser of the Federal Government the question whether he had the power to send troops into a State for such purpose, we are confident that Attorney General Gregory would have infinite difficulty to find any provision in the Constitution authorizing such an interference with the processes of justice in a State.

At a mass meeting of the sympathizers with Mooney held in Washington on the same day one of the speakers made this declaration: "I "do not believe there is any living "man in California who believes "Mooney had anything to do with "the explosion of that bomb." Twelve men impaneled as a jury found Mooney guilty, and Senator Phelan of California, speaking in the Senate on July 23, said in reply to the charge that the trial was irregular: "This "is not true. There was nothing ir-"regular in the court processes. He "had a fair trial. I believe Mooney "and his associates were victims of "their own cupidity and that they "were bribed by German money to "perpetrate this crime." The San Francisco Argonaut of June 16 declares that "there has never been in "any honest mind a question as to "Mooney's guilt," and, furthermore, "no unprejudiced man in California "has or has had any doubts as to "the justice of Mooney's conviction." Also, The Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, and The Sacramento Bee approve the verdict of the jury. Evidently, there are living men in California who believe that Mooney had something to to with the explosion of that bomb.

A meeting was held at Carnegie Hall in this city on Sunday to demand a new trial for Mooney. Mr. Dudley Field Malone was one of the speakers. He insisted that the "denial of speedy justice" in the case of Mooney and similar perversions of justice "are striking more ghastly "blows at our men fighting and dy-"ing in France than Germany with "all her power can inflict." He is also reported to have said that the two things which would make for useful reconstruction after the war were "the program of the Russian "revolution and the economic, social, "and political program of the British "Labor Party." What the program of the Russian revolution means to Russia and to civilization is well understood in this country. The British Labor Party not a great while ago, if we may accept Mr. Arthur Henderson as its representative spokesman, demanded proletariat rule in the British islands, a program not easily distinguishable from that of the Bolsheviki in Russia. It will be remembered that one of the earliest demonstrations in behalf of Mooney took place in Petrograd, where threats of violence against our Ambassador were made if Mooney were not pardoned.

A good many persons in California, including the Judge who presided at the trial of Mooney, a good many persons in other States of the Union, fair-minded persons, speaking without prejudice and not prompted by the spirit of radicalism, believe and have said that Mooney should have another trial. But is not Mooney in great danger of being injured by the excessive zeal and unwise speech of some of those who are active in his behalf? The outcries of anarchists and I. W. W. agitators and Bolshevists and all sorts of irresponsible radicals against the sentence of Mooney, it may fairly be pointed out, are ill-adapted to the end these persons seek to attain.

There are two sides to the Mooney case. Somebody did cause the explosion while the preparedness parade was making its progress through the streets of San Francisco two years ago. Six persons were killed outright, some forty more were wounded, of whom three or four subsequently died. Billings, one of the four persons arrested with Mooney, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. Mooney was convicted and sentenced to death, he was to have been executed on Aug. 23, but has been reprieved by the Governor of his State until Dec. 13. Nine persons, possibly ten, were murdered by the act of the criminals who caused the explosion. Do we hear any demands in these many mass meetings for the detection and punishment of those criminals? Apparently there are no sympathizers with the dead, with their living friends who mourn their deaths, or with the interests of justice, which demand punishment for the crime. Mooney's defenders insist that he is innocent. That statement is against evidence. The most that can be fairly said is, because of irregularities charged to have occurred at the trial, that, in the words of presiding Judge Griffin, "right and "justice demand that a new trial of "Mooney should be had in order that "no possible mistake should be made "in a case where a human life is at "stake." The principal charge of irregularity is that Oxman, one of the witnesses against Mooney, attempted to suborn perjury in corroboration of his testimony. But the President's Federal Commission, appointed to inquire into the fairness of the trial, reported that "it is true that Oxman "was tried for attempting subornation of perjury and was acquitted." Law officers of the State of California and others concerned in the prosecution have been subjected to torrents of abuse. The Federal Commission, of which Secretary of Labor Wilson was the head, reported that "Mooney was regarded as a labor "agitator of malevolence by the "public utilities of San Francisco," and that "they undoubtedly sought 'to get'" him. On the evidence presented, and particularly on the opinion of Judge Griffin, a case may have been made out for a new trial. The Supreme Court of California on July 22 affirmed its preliminary order denying a new trial to Mooney. If we are to accept as true the statements of some of his defenders, we must assume that the Executive and courts of California are parties to a conspiracy with the corporations to deny justice to the prisoner. That assumption will not be made save by those who are resolved that Mooney should be set free whether guilty or not. The agitation in behalf of Mooney has taken the form of an attempt to override the courts and the laws and the Governor of the State of California. There is a very great probability that if a new trial were now granted it would be found impossible to impanel an unprejudiced jury, and Mooney, though the evidence might remove all reasonable doubt of his guilt, would not be convicted. That result, apparently, would satisfy those who are clamoring for his release. It would not satisfy the demands of justice, which would leave a monstrous crime unpunished. And that crime, it would be well to remember, was perpetrated against persons who were demonstrating their patriotism by a parade in support of the demand that this country should make adequate preparation for defense against its enemies.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Found Three Grievances.

After describing with almost lyrical enthusiasm the American troops in France and what they have done and are doing there, Otto H. Kahn, in order, perhaps, that his picture should not consist entirely of high lights—that, as is well known, is bad for any picture—admitted that in the course of his visit to the front lines he had found three things about which the men complained, as he thought, with reason. Their uniforms are uncomfortable, they are not promptly paid, and the mail service is bad.

None of these grievances can be called serious, at least as compared with winning the war, but they are not trivial, either, and at least two of them, if not exactly inexcusable, certainly are not irremediable, and therefore the responsibility for their continuance at this late date unremedied needs fixing. For then the remedy would be found.

The uniform of the American Army has long been a subject of complaint from the men who have to wear it. The color is admirable, for it confers the "low visibility" so much desired in modern warfare. The quality of the cloth is also excellent, usually. It is the fashioning, the cut, of the garments, and especially that of the tunic, with its high, stiff collar, that is the cause of complaint. Improvement would be easy, from the tailor's point of view, but a judicious change, though it would have been inexpensive as well as easy, had it been made before we entered the war, when our army consisted of only a few thousand men, now would be so costly and difficult that to undertake it would hardly be judicious, great as the advantages of successful accomplishment would be.

The circumstances as regards pay and mail are entirely different. Both of those problems require for solution only appreciation of how much they have to do with the maintenance of what is called morale, meaning contentment and enthusiasm, and the bringing into play of plain business ability. It is not because the Government lacks money that the soldiers so often find themselves with empty pockets—a condition particularly irksome to Americans—and it would hardly be claimed that a prompt distribution and collection of letters at the front is more than occasionally impossible.

She Defended by Making an Attack.

A truly remarkable contribution to the interminable debate of the servant question was the one made in the letter from "Mary Ann," printed on this page Sunday. It began with a decidedly inaccurate statement of what The Times had said about the "degrading" effect of domestic service, but the remainder of the communication went straight and close to the very heart of the ancient problem when the writer declared that it has remained unsolved so long because women, as a class, have never accepted with sincerity the fundamental principle either of Christianity or of democracy. This is a terrible accusation, of course, and vehement denials of its truth can confidently be expected to come from many quarters.

In a way and to a degree, however, the charge is—well, not as libelous as it might be. But men should be cautious not to proclaim its verity with too much joy and promptness, for some of the feminine defendants are very likely to insist that if women are to be convicted on either or both counts of "Mary Ann's" indictment, their brothers in justice must be hauled before the same tribunal for trial.

Probably, in this case as in most others, men and women are about equally guilty, but in this particular case it is the guilt of the women, not that of the men, that is chiefly responsible for the creation of the servant problem, and it is therefore the women who must plead first.

"Mary Ann"—whose epistolary style, by the way, was so far from ancillary as to excite deep suspicion as to her right to the name—declared that if the majority of housewives did not forget that their maids were human beings, with the ordinary human need of sympathetic treatment by those about them, the maids, too, would be different—would show the qualities they are said by their innumerable critics lamentably to lack. Whether or not she has ground for her assertion can be left to the consciences of those against whom it was directed. Whether or not they will be moved to admit that she was wholly, or even partially, right remains to be seen.

At any rate, "Mary Ann" went deep into her subject, instead of treading airily over its surface, as has been the wont of her predecessors in the old controversy, and that was a welcome change.

Competence Defies Betrayal.

Just as the Germans, for some days past, have been ascribing their reverse on the Marne to the betrayal of their plans of operation to General Foch by prisoners who talked too much and too truly after they fell into his hands, so now the Austrians are explaining their disaster on the Piave in much the same way. The only difference is that in the one case prisoners get the blame and in the other deserters, but the difference is without much of a distinction, for the prisoner who reveals the secrets of his own side to the enemy is also a deserter and little if any better than a traitor. The chances are that both General Foch and General Diaz will get valuable information from both of the classes accused. That, however, is a military commonplace, and the value of information so acquired is never known until after it has been tested in battle. Nothing could be much more nearly certain than that neither the French nor the Italian commander based his plan of campaign on a foundation of such dubious and problematical soundness as disclosures made by the only sort of soldiers that would make any at all.

Betrayal is always a convenient explanation of failure, but in war it is rarely a true one and still more rarely is it anything like the whole explanation. Really good Generals scorn to offer it, for it is a confession of incompetence in guarding against a danger which is as much a part of war as is its other perils.

NO GERMAN ADVERTISING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article in The Times of this morning regarding "Teuton Propaganda Paid for by Rumely," Le Roy A. Van Patten is quoted as testifying that Louis N. Hammerling told him or his representative that a "part of it (namely the advertising) had to be given to the Collin Armstrong Company."

This is the first we have heard of any such arrangement. Neither Mr. Hammerling nor any one else has ever approached us with even a suggestion that we should handle or place any German propaganda advertising. We know nothing whatever about the matter. We trust you will give this statement as much prominence as was accorded the statement quoted above.

COLLIN ARMSTRONG, INC.,
By Collin Armstrong, President.
New York, July 29, 1918.

FIRST HOME.

Four little rooms fast bound by narrow walls,
High set above the city's clamoring run—
As these four rooms have done.

Though heat-dazed streets go staggering below—

Old boards creaked loud in the complaining floor
When, joy-urged, first we entered this abode,
And I shall keep that creaking evermore,
Deep, with glad laughter, in my memory stowed.

The walls were never lovely, yet I press
Them with the consciousness that where my hands
Touch they have heard our secrets; my caress
Is given because their muteness understands.

Four little rooms that guard our dreams from strife,
Far from the mire and near to sky and sun,
No heaven can wait in any rooms of life

FOR NEWS PRINT INCREASE.

Appeal to Commission on the Ground of Higher Costs.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Paper manufacturers today appealed to the Federal Trade Commission for increased prices on news print as of May 1, June 1, and July 1. The American Newspaper Publishers Association objected to a hearing, contending that the commission's functions as arbiter on paper prices were suspended pending a decision on the manufacturers' appeal from the $3.10 a hundredweight price fixed by the commission and effective last April 1. Without passing on the publishers' contention, the commission decided to hear evidence, beginning tomorrow.

Henry A. Wise of New York, counsel for the manufacturers, said that the increase was requested because of advanced costs of labor and material and freight rates. Cost of wood for making paper, he told the commission, had increased 35 per cent.

Only developments in the cost of manufacture since April 1 will be considered by the commission, Chairman Colver announced. He added that the evidence would be heard as a matter of convenience to the parties and that decision would be made later as to whether the commission would consider it with a view to amending the price prior to the decision on the manufacturers' appeal, which is to be heard by Federal Court Judges in New York Aug. 14.

The companies asking the increase are the International Paper Company, the Gould Paper Company, the Minnesota and Ontario Power Company, Ltd., the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., the Lake Superior Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., the Donnacona Paper Company, Ltd., the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., Price Brothers Company, Ltd., the Laurentide Company, Ltd., the Belgo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., and the Brompton Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd.

CROWN GETS MATABELELAND

Decision of British Privy Council in Case Involving 48,000,000 Acres.

LONDON, July 29.—By a decision of the Privy Council announced today the domination of some 48,000,000 acres of land in Southern Rhodesia remains in the Crown, but the British South African Company will continue to adminis- ca Company will continue to adminis- financial matters.

With this decision one of the biggest actions ever brought in the British courts has finally been settled. There were four claimants to the land, which is known as Matabeleland, and before 1888 was ruled by Lobengula, chief of the Matabeles. These claimants were the Crown, in other words the Imperial Government; the Legislative Council, the British South Africa Company, or, as it is commonly called, the Chartered Company, and the natives.

The company occupied the country after the overthrow of Lobengula and asserted that it was the owner of the unalienated land of Southern Rhodesia. The Crown submitted that by assuming a protectorate over the territories Queen Victoria assumed complete rights and powers over them. The natives contended that the country never was annexed by Great Britain, while the Legislative Council claimed the land on behalf of the inhabitants of Southern Rhodesia.

CHANCE TO BE CITIZENS.

Certain Germans and Austrians Are Favored by Amendment.

County Clerk Schneider called attention yesterday to the fact that under the amendment to the naturalization law which became effective May 9, 1918, natives of Germany and Austria who declared their intention of becoming citizens prior to April 5 and Dec. 6, 1917 respectively are not classed as enemy aliens so far as naturalization is concerned, and that they may procure their second papers and later become citizens within practically the same period as natives of other foreign countries. Mr. Schneider explained the only additional delay is caused by a requirement that a list of all these applicants shall first be sent to the Department of Justice for purposes of investigation, which will extend the usual probationary period from ninety days to about four months. First papers may also be procured now and, after two years, second papers may be issued, subject to favorable reports after investigation.

Prior to the amendment the application of a native of an enemy country for citizenship could not be heard until after the expiration of the war. Incorrect information concerning the law having been given to the public Mr. Schneider thinks that several thousands of Germans and Austrians, eligible for citizenship and anxious to become citizens are impatiently awaiting the close of hostilities in order that they may become naturalized.

STRAUS TO TAKE VACATION

After Clearing Up Some Unfinished Work for Service Board.

Oscar S. Straus, who has just retired as Chairman of the Public Service Commission, said yesterday that he had made no plans for the future beyond winding up the investigation he has been making into the condition of the sugar trade, a task assigned him by the National Food Administration; to clear up some unfinished work of the commission, and then to take a rest of a few weeks.

Commissioner Ordway, who will fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Commissioner Hubbell to the Chairmanship, took the oath of office yesterday and immediately began work.

Aid for Crippled Children.

Palestine Volunteers to Parade.

Among the volunteers in the Jewish Legion who will leave the British Recruiting Headquarters, 220 West Forty-second Street, at noon on Thursday, in order to fight in Palestine, will be Samuel Zuckerman, field representative of the Jewish Welfare Board at Camp Gordon, and Arnold Kretchmar-Isreeli, formerly editor of a French daily newspaper in Constantinople, more recently connected with the Russkoe Slovo of this city. Mr. Zuckerman is a Jewish journalist, who came to this country from Cape Town, South Africa. Mr. Kretchmar-Isreeli is a native of Palestine, whose wife and children are there at the present time. The contingent that will leave on Thursday will parade tomorrow afternoon and attend a mass meeting in the evening. Arrangements for the parade and mass meeting will be announced today.

Must Order Books from Publishers.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Books and periodicals can be sent to American prisoners of war in Germany only when they are ordered through the publishers and are dispatched from the offices of publishers, the War Department announced today. This ruling by the military censorship was made because old books form a convenient method of secret communication and require extraordinary scrutiny by the censorship forces.

ROBERTSON QUITS FUEL COMMISSION

AT ODDS WITH GARFIELD

When Charles E. Robertson, of the State Advisory Board of the National Fuel Administration, left his office yesterday he declared that he and Dr. Garfield had come to the parting of the ways and that regardless of the fact that Dr. Garfield had not accepted his resignation he intended to sever relationship with the administration. Beside resigning as member of the Advisory Board Mr. Robertson has also declined to serve as a Deputy State Fuel Administrator under State Administrator Delos W. Cooke.

Mr. Robertson was appointed to the Advisory Board by Albert H. Wiggin, former State Fuel Administrator, and after Mr. Wiggin's resignation he was mentioned as a possible successor to the office of State Fuel Administrator. Instead of making an appointment for New York Dr. Garfield conceived the plan of dividing the State and offered the office of State Administrator for the territory north of Westchester County to Mr. Robertson. The latter is unalterably opposed to any plan to divide the State, and he went to Washington and so expressed himself to Dr. Garfield. Dr. Garfield did not take that view, and it was the proposition of dividing the State that led to the break between the two men. Mr. Robertson sent this letter to the National Fuel Administrator on July 3, which he said, Dr. Garfield had refused to make public:

Against Dividing State.

I have given careful consideration to your recent tender to me of the appointment as Fuel Administrator for the State of New York, exclusive of Greater New York and Long Island.

Judging from my own experience and the unanimous opinion of my friends who have been closely in touch with the affairs of the New York State Fuel Administration, I cannot escape the conclusion that a most serious mistake will be made if the State of New York, or any other State, is subdivided for purposes of administration.

In the first place, in so far as I have been able to learn, no reason for such a subdivision of the State has been put forward; while, on the other hand, there appear to be several unanswerable arguments in favor of continuing the administration of the State as a unit.

The situation of the whole country with respect to the coal supply is critical, so much so that a shortage of many hundred thousand tons of anthracite for the State of New York alone must be anticipated. A shortage of such magnitude will entail the most careful distribution of the allotment for New York, and a general spirit of give and take and co-operation between all sections of the State. I know that this spirit has prevailed in the past, but feel strongly that it cannot continue if various sections of the State are to be placed under separate jurisdictions.

The appointment of Fuel Administrators for separate parts of the State will also, of course, increase the expense of administration, but this is a minor matter when compared with the confusion which must follow both with regard to supply and distribution.

The anthracite coal supply for the State of New York has already been allotted for the current year, for the State as a whole, and I can see no reason for making a complicated subdivision of this allotment.

I feel sure that if you will make inquiry of those familiar with the New York State Fuel Administration, you will find them indorsing the views I have expressed. In any event, if there are to be two State Administrators appointed, I am familiar enough with the State conditions to know that the Administrator for the territory outside of Greater New York should be an up-State man.

Feeling as I do that the radical changes which you propose to make in the administration for New York State are unwise under present conditions, I am constrained, with the greatest regret, to decline the appointment which you tender.

Garfield Ignores Letter.

Dr. Garfield ignored the letter, and when later he decided against dividing the State and appointed Mr. Cooke to succeed Mr. Wiggin, he appointed Mr. Robertson with Reeve Schley, the present New York County Fuel Administrator, as Deputies. On July 23 Mr. Robertson not only refused the appointment, but he wired Dr. Garfield his resignation as a member of the Advisory Board.

"For the last year I have given my entire time as a member of the Advisory Board of the State, and now that a State Administrator, in whose selection I heartily concur, has been appointed, I believe that I can properly ask to be relieved of my duties," Mr. Robertson wrote Dr. Garfield.

Since that time no word has come to him as to whether his resignation has been accepted or what course Dr. Garfield intends to pursue. Having waited in vain Mr. Robertson formally announced yesterday that he was through with his work as Fuel Administrator, and that on the advice of his physician he was going to take a long rest. He is hoping in the meantime some word will come from Washington to end what he considers a most embarrassing position.

EXPLAINS RULE TO BAKERS.

Substitutes Still Must Be Used with White Wheat Flour.

The Federal Food Board issued a notice to bakers yesterday calling attention to the fact that the modification of the substitute rule announced last week and effective for two weeks, beginning July 29, applies only to whole wheat and graham flours. In this period bakers may use either whole wheat flour or graham flour without substitutes.

"It appears that some misapprehension has been caused by the circulation of a report that white wheat flour may be used without substitutes under this modification," the Food Board's statement said. "It should be clearly understood that there has been no modification of the substitute rule so far as white flour is concerned. The modification applies only to the use of whole wheat and graham flours. Any baker who uses white flour without the prescribed amount of substitutes will be guilty of violation of the substitute rule."

FORM ALLIED FOOD COUNCIL

LONDON, July 29.—The conference in London of the Food Controllers of the United Kingdom, United States, France, and Italy is continuing. The establishment of an inter-allied food council, composed of the Controllers, is now an accomplished fact. A resolution adopted today emphasizes the need for economy and the elimination of waste, as well as increased production, in order to build up the stocks as insurance against all possibilities, and concludes:

"We cannot administer the food problem on the basis of one year's wants. We must prepare for long continuance if we are to insure absolute victory."

GODSOL RELEASED ON $50,000 BAIL

EXTRADITION HELD ILLEGAL

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Frank J. Godsol, whose fight against extradition to France has been long and sensational, was released from prison today by Justice Gould of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Godsol is the American-born French citizen who was charged by the French Government with wrongfully obtaining $1,500,000 in commissions on motor trucks bought by the French War Department from the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company. He has been in jail here since March 6.

Godsol said today he would remain in Washington for several weeks in order to meet any new steps taken in the case. He gave $50,000 bail pending further action. It is almost a foregone conclusion that the attorneys for the French Government will appeal from Justice Gould's decision, which reversed Justice Hitz of the District Supreme Court.

After Godsol had been in prison for forty days, the extent of time he could be held without a hearing, Justice Hitz, sitting as a United States Commissioner, held him for extradition. Godsol's lawyers immediately sued for a writ of habeas corpus, and it was upon this application that the decision was rendered today.

The complaint charged that in Paris March 25, 1915, Godsol represented to Norris Perry, agent of the Pierce Company, that no contracts with the French Government for motor cars could be obtained except through an agency established in Paris; that Godsol's relations with the French Government were such as to allow him to control the orders for trucks, and that commissions would be necessary. The complaint further alleged that Godsol, between July 9, 1915, and Dec. 31, 1917, received, under the name of Elie Heliopolous, (who acted as agent,) $1,563,104.84.

In making the decision today Justice Gould said:

"Under American law, the crime of obtaining money by false pretenses is deemed committed in the place where the money is obtained and not where the pretense is made. It follows, therefore, that, as the acts charged to have been done by petitioner would not have constituted the crime of false pretenses in this jurisdiction where he is found, the petitioner is not extraditable under the treaty.

"There were five persons connected with the negotiations leading up to the signing of the alleged contract, Heliopoulos, De Vere, Higgins, Godsol, and Perry. Perry went down with the Lusitania. The depositions of De Vere and Higgins were not submitted in the record."

AID FOR NEEDY FARMERS.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Relief for sections of the country where successive crop failures have reduced farmers to a state of poverty and threaten to compel them to abandon their farms has been provided by the allotment by President Wilson of $5,000,000 to be used by the Treasury Department and the Department of Agriculture, acting jointly. County agents will be relied on for indorsements of applications, and the Federal Land Bank officials will conduct all negotiations for loans and for their final collection.

The loans, which may not exceed $3 an acre for a maximum of 150 acres, will not be made to farmers who do not intend to or who cannot engage in Fall seeding. A statement on the subject by the Treasury Department said:

"It is not intended that this fund shall be used to make loans to farmers who have banking collateral and can otherwise secure loans. The recent action of the War Finance Corporation, indicating its willingness to make advances to banks and trust companies which have made loans to farmers and cattlemen, will ease the general financial situation and in a large measure enable bankers to extend accommodations to farmers having such collateral. Banks are urged by the Treasury Department to avail themselves of the offer of the War Finance Corporation.

"This fund, because of its limited amount, will be used necessarily principally in connection with the Fall planting of wheat or of preferred substitute grain in the areas involved."

News Agency Credited Paris Comment to the Allied High Command.

"New York, July 29.—On July 19 a press association distributed over the country an alleged Paris dispatch purporting to be a declaration of the allied high command, which includes the American forces, quoting the high command as saying it had taken the initiative, that prisoners and guns surpassed the fondest hopes of the command, and giving certain other battle details. The Associated Press caused an investigation to be made in Paris, and learned that the command had issued no statement whatever.

"The investigation disclosed also that the dispatch as filed by the correspondent did not attribute to the command the expressions quoted and that apparently the dispatch was changed after being censored in France and in the United States so as to represent the allied high command as making statements of fact and authorizing comments not one word of which the high command ever uttered."

SENATORS TO TAKE UP AIRPLANE CRITICISM

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Criticisms by General Pershing and others of the De Haviland airplane, now the principal output of American factories, are being investigated simultaneously by Secretary Baker and the Senate committee inquiring into aircraft production.

After Secretary Baker's statement last week to Senate committee members that General Pershing had sent a cablegram criticising the De Haviland machines sent him from this country, suggesting changes, and disapproving features both of design and construction, the Senate committee arranged to reopen its hearings tomorrow for further inquiry.

Three army officers in charge of testing De Haviland machines made at the Wright plant at Dayton, Ohio, have been subpoenaed to appear tomorrow. The committee also plans to call other witnesses, with the prospect that its hearings, which had been closed, will continue for a week or ten days and delay the final report, which had been expected within a fortnight.

Criticisms of the De Haviland machine, according to Senate committeemen, who discussed the question with Mr. Baker and General March, Chief of Staff, at their weekly conference last Saturday, have come not only from General Pershing, but from officers prominently identified with the flying service, as well as from American aviators and aeronautical engineers, who have seen the British design of the De Havilands and the American redesigned type in action. Weakness of the wing fabric, which is said to have caused several fatal accidents; weakening of structural parts by excess of steel bolts and deficient fuel capacity are known to be some of the criticisms raised against the American design. Senators said today that Secretary Baker had promised an inquiry into statements that, in redesigning the De Haviland to take the increased load of the American type, largely caused by increased weight and speed of the Liberty motor, the wooden frame was weakened by the use of bolts closely assembled at structural joints. Secretary Baker declined to discuss the matter at his conference with newspaper correspondents.

According to information given to Senators by the War Secretary, 753 De Haviland machines have been completed in this country up to the last report from official sources, of which more than 400 have been shipped to General Pershing, who, however, has reported receipt so far of only 67. There are no reports from General Pershing that any of the American-built De Havilands have been used by the American forces on the fighting front.

The Senate Military Subcommittee's investigation of De Haviland production members said, has not yet developed that any of the criticisms made against the Americanized type were well founded.

EXPECTS AIR DREADNOUGHTS

Will Carry 100 Men on Bombing Offensives, Caproni Says.

PARIS, July 29.—"Airplanes carrying 100 men and equipped with engines equal in power to those in a medium sized steamship will be developed within three years," said Gianni Caproni, inventor of the Caproni bombing plane, in an interview today.

"The bombing planes now in use," Signor Caproni continued, "will be mere dwarfs compared with those to be developed. There is a surprise in store for the Germans. Instead of the forty and fifty machines necessary to start on a bombing expedition, it will be possible to do the same work with a new machine as powerful as the whole squadron. The new machines will be much more efficacious and will prove a great saving in operation.

"A trip across the Atlantic could be accomplished with the present-day machines during July, August, and September, and probably October. The weather situation would be unfavorable during the other months of the year. Heavy fogs make aerial navigation impossible. Aviators are unable to guide themselves in a fog, as it makes everything black. A trip across the ocean at this time would have to be made by way of New York, the Azores, and Portugal.

"The development of an aerial code similar to the maritime code will be necessary before there can be general aerial navigation. There must be international signals, like those at sea, aerial laws and a whole volume of regulations for aerial transportation.

"The Liberty motor will do. We want them now in large quantities. I have seen them work and they are satisfactory for bombing machines. Finer engines, made with much intricate and specialized parts, like a watch, cannot be made in quantities, but the Liberty motor can, which is a big advantage.

"War of the future lies in the air, for when the big commercial planes are developed they can easily be turned into fighting machines, with powerful offensive propensities. England was able to defend herself with a large navy, but it will be necessary in the future for nations to have large aerial forces.

"Battleships will be no match for the new aerial machines, which will revolutionize warfare both on land and sea. The activities of the fighting forces will be transferred to the air. Armies and navies will be unable to battle with the immense bombing machines of the future.

"The world will look to America for great developments in aviation because she has unlimited resources, while European countries are impoverished by long years of spoliation and destruction. America will manufacture large commercial machines. They will be speedy and able to carry a hundred tons instead of a thousand pounds as now."

Signor Caproni is in Paris on Government business. He expects to visit America, probably after the war. His whole time is now devoted to war purposes. He is not developing commercial machines.

VOTE FOR MEMORIAL TO MAJOR MITCHEL

ISSUE CALL FOR FUNDS

It was decided yesterday at a meeting of representative men and women at the City Hall that an adequate and permanent memorial should be raised in honor of the late Major John Purroy Mitchel. No decision as to the character of the memorial was reached.

The first act, after the meeting was opened, was the election of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who is in Maine, as Honorary Chairman of the meeting. After tributes had been paid to the former Mayor, the following resolution was adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, It is the natural desire of the people of the City of New York to recognize in appropriate and permanent form the services of the late John Purroy Mitchel to this municipality and to the nation; and

Whereas, It is their desire that the high example of Major Mitchel's civic and patriotic devotion, the dedication of so many years of his young and splendid life to the city that he loved, and the heroic sacrifice of life itself for the country whose cause he made his own, should be celebrated and long remembered by his fellow-citizens, those who are here and those who shall follow; therefore

Be It Resolved, That this committee, representative of the citizenship of New York, hereby undertakes the raising of a suitable memorial to Major Mitchel within the city, and of such character as may be later determined; and be it further

Resolved, That we call upon the people, through their subscription of the necessary funds, to express further, and in this enduring fashion, their appreciation of his services to them as Mayor and as citizen and soldier.

The New York World turned over the sum which it had collected, amounting to more than $20,000, as the start toward the memorial. Cleveland H. Dodge, who was elected permanent Chairman of the committee, said:

"When the citizens of New York got over the first shock of the death of our friend, Major Mitchel, everybody thought that there should be a memorial to perpetuate his memory. The World first started to take subscriptions and other newspapers followed. The friends of Major Mitchel, however, thought the scope was not large enough, and The World magnanimously said that it would turn over to a Citizens' Committee the subscriptions it had received.

"I think it goes without saying that the whole citizenship of this city will want some memorial of his life as a citizen and patriot."

Mr. Dodge said that the life of Nathan Hale had been an inspiration to the men of generation after generation which followed him, and that no man could look at his statue in front of the City Hall and think of the story of his life without being the better for it. He said that he wanted future New Yorkers to be benefited in the same way by being reminded of the great qualities and heroic end of Major Mitchel.

"Nothing we can say or do," continued Mr. Dodge, "can add to the lustre of the name of Major Mitchel. None of us who worked with him and loved him can forget him, but we want to have something that will stand before future generations so that they will ask who John Purroy Mitchel was, and will receive an inspiration from his story."

Mr. Dodge said that the manner in which honor should be done to Mr. Mitchel's memory was a thing to be decided later, after the committee's work of raising money was well advanced.

Officers elected yesterday to serve with Mr. Dodge were John Mitchell, Henry Morgenthau, and George McAneny, Vice Chairmen; Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, and Justice John J. Freschi, Secretary. Some of those at the meeting were William C. Breed, Daniel Frohman, Justice Henry A. Gildersleeve, Eugenius H. Outerbridge, J. Waldo Smith, W. M. K. Olcott, Alfred E. Smith, Emory R. Buckner, Lamar Hardy, Leo Arnstein, Justice Daniel F. Murphy, William J. Flynn, R. A. C. Smith, and Theodore Rousseau.

A theatrical division of the John Purroy Mitchel Memorial Fund was formed yesterday at a meeting of theatrical managers and producers in the offices of E. F. Albee. Marcus Loew was selected as Chairman of the committee to obtain subscriptions from theatrical managers, producers, and members of the theatrical profession and motion picture industry. The following are the amounts subscribed by the individuals and companies represented at the meeting, totaling $3,650: E. F. Albee, $500; A. Paul Keith, $500; Marcus Loew, $500; William Fox, $500; Cohan & Harris, $500; B. S. Moss, $250; Strand Theatre, $200; William A. Brady, $200; estate of Henry B. Harris, $200; Lyceum Theatre, $100; Nicholas Schenck, $100, and Hurtig & Seamon, $100.

GERMAN VANDALISM AT CHATEAU-THIERRY

Destruction and Defilement in Fine Houses When the Invaders Had to Leave.

LONDON, July 29, (British Wireless Service.)—Evidence accumulates that during their brief stay in the Marne salient the Germans again indulged in wholesale acts of vandalism. In a message sent from French Army Headquarters the Reuter correspondent gives details of their conduct while in Château-Thierry.

The Germans held the town some time and apparently thought that they would remain there indefinitely. When they found that they would have to give it up they apparently determined to take the only vengeance in their power. The injuries which have been inflicted on the town are such as could not be the result of shelling, the correspondent points out, as those houses which suffered most were entirely uninjured by shell, shrapnel, or bullet.

"These houses," he says, "were magnificently furnished, the walls hung with costly tapestries and admirable pictures. The furniture is of exceptional elegance, and impressive mirrors and charming statuettes were numerous.

"Today there is nothing that has not been destroyed. The tapestries have been hacked to pieces, the pictures slit from corner to corner, the leather and other chair coverings have been ripped from their frames and all the delicate marqueterie and the irreplaceable examples of craftsmanship of past centuries have been smashed. The legs have been torn off the tables and used in further work of destruction. There is not a mirror which has not been broken, and the glass and china flung at them lie in fragments before them.

"The costly carpets have been soiled and rent in every possible way and inkpots flung at the silken papers on the walls. This vengeful fury has been carried even to the extent of smashing nurseries and doll houses. The fashion in which beds and rooms have been defiled is difficult of description. It would seem the work of lunatics."

Accused of Stealing Blueprint.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Auguste Bach, an employe of the Government gun factory here, was arrested today and held for the action of a Grand Jury on a charge that he removed a blueprint of a torpedo from the Washington Navy Yard. Government agents said the print was found in his home. Bach claims to be a native of Alsace-Lorraine and a naturalized American citizen.

BATTLE IN MURMANSK SAID TO BE IMMINENT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—The Daily Express correspondent at Christiania, telegraphing on Sunday, says:

"The news has just come from Vardoe of the arrival of the first passenger steamer from Archangel since last Autumn, and passengers say a conflict is imminent between the Entente forces and the Finns and German troops near Enaresjaen, where the enemy purpose to push down to the sea at Petchenga via Salminaerri.

"The Germans are repairing a road planned some years ago by the Russo-Finnish Government. Some say they are laying a railway, but this is not confirmed. The Allies are believed to be constructing a road from Petchenga to Salmijaervi to meet them half way, workmen having been engaged from neighboring districts and provided with welcome supplies of foodstuffs.

"The food situation is very serious in Finland. There is practically no bread and people are dying of starvation. A well-known Finnish artist succumbed the other day.

"Finland is still nominally neutral and has representatives in Paris and London, but the population is decidedly Germanophil, chiefly through the ancient fear and hatred of Russia."

ALAND ISLANDERS REBUFF FINLAND

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, July 29.—Some time ago the Finnish Government called up for military service five classes of men on the Aland Islands, but finding that this measure threatened to meet resolute opposition from the population, which is entirely Swedish, the Government did not persist. A few days ago another similar order was issued, and the men were to report on July 25.

A Finnish destroyer was waiting in the harbor of Mariehamn to take the recruits to Helsingfors. The men did not report, but sent a note to the district commander instead, pointing out that the calling up order was illegally issued and that they refused to do military duty in Finland, but were willing to join for service on the Alands. As an absolute minimum, they further demanded that commands should be given in Swedish and not in Finnish.

The destroyer left with no recruits on board. So independent Finland has also got her own little Ireland, which may cause her a great deal of trouble.

FRANCIS IS OPTIMISTIC.

Says He'll Stay in Russia if He Has to "Live on Wheels."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—Americans arriving here from Russia agree in the belief that that country will not participate in the war again on either side.

"Russia's heart was broken in the defeats late in 1915," said one. "She was so big that there were enough shattered remnants to create an impression of activity for some time afterward, but her strength declined steadily. If the Allies strike a heart blow on the western front within a few months, it will paralyze the German tentacles in Russia."

Ambassador Francis is reported well and optimistic. He said a short time ago that he purposed staying in Russia if he had "to live on wheels."

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—The recent Monarchist congress at Kiev resolved to form centres throughout Russia for the re-establishment of the imperial régime on the lines of that in power prior to March, 1917, and to aim at the reunion of the Ukraine and Great Russia under Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholavitch, according to brief details received here. Kiev newspapers report a recrudescence of the activities of the Blackk Hundreds.

When confirmation of the death of the former Emperor was received in Kiev many Russian officers were seen with crepe wound about their Crosses of St. George.

When his execution was first denied a crowded thanksgiving service was held in the Kiev Cathedral and the people sang the ancient hymn "God Protect the Czar." The Archpriest during celebration of the mass declared:

"The church stands outside politics, but it is befitting all true believing Russians to pray for Nicholas, the servant of God, who has suffered much."

He spoke of the impending re-establishment of the monarchy and the dynasty, saying: "The temple which was destroyed shall rise again."

After the service there was bloody fighting in the streets of Kiev between the Monarchists and Bolsheviki.

COSSACKS FORM ALLIANCE.

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—A treaty has been signed at Rostov-on-the-Don by which the Governments of the Don and the Astrakhan districts mutually recognize their complete autonomy and promise mutual assistance in the annexation of other districts the possession of which is considered absolutely necessary, from the economic and strategical standpoints, according to the Kiev newspapers.

The treaty, it is stated, declares further for a common fight against Bolshevism within their territories and in the northern Caucasus. The aim of these Governments, it is asserted, is the formation of the Federal State of South Russia.

CZECHS TAKE ANOTHER TOWN.

Also Capture There Bolshevist Arms and Ammunition.

SHANGHAI, July 29, (Associated Press.)—The Czechoslovaks have occupied the town of Schmakova, according to a dispatch from Vladivostok.

I-O-U's as Money in Petrograd.

PETROGRAD, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Penciled "I O U's" are being issued by several of the larger restaurants on account of the shortage in money of the smaller denominations, which has become acute in Petrograd. These notes are even given as change for 40-ruble bills, approximately $4 in American money.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Developments of import to the financial structure of the nation were not lacking yesterday, although the security markets made no reflection of them and trading in stocks dropped to nearly the smallest volume for any day of the year. The announcement of the terms under which the Government approved the pending Chinese loan contained information of an encouraging nature to bankers and exporters in that it was specified that Federal influence would be used to support American citizens in their business intercourse with foreign lands. Considered in relation with partially formed plans of American interests for participation in undertakings outside the country after the war, the attitude of the Government could hardly be looked upon as anything but constructive.

The war news was more stimulating, if anything, than what was heard of the operations of the allied armies in France last week. It was probable that the firmness displayed by some of the railroad stocks under light buying was furthered by the Southern Pacific's statement for 1917, showing earnings which appeared remarkable in contrast with the experience of numerous other companies. An earned balance of more than $17 per share of stock, compared with a figure somewhat in excess of $12 in the preceding year, was something for persons to think about who had displayed discouragement over the railroads as income producers.

The meeting of Government officials in charge of shipbuilding and the distribution of steel by steel producers was not productive of comment in the financial district during business hours because of the long session, but the results are likely to have a part in later consideration of the steel industry. The purpose of the gathering was for the Government men to learn from the manufacturers of semi-finished and raw material the extent of their expected output in the balance of the year. From the figures presented the War Industries Board expects to let the general public know in a few days the amount of steel which the war program will need up to the end of the year, and also the probable allotments of steel to the less essential branches of industry. The latter phase of the situation is held by many business leaders as of great importance to industry as a whole, inasmuch as the rapidly growing needs of the Government in the last few months have prevented producers of articles not needed for war and shipbuilding purposes to plan their operations for the future. It need not be emphasized, of course, that the demands of the munition plants, shipyards, railroads, and military facilities of all sorts will stand first in the proposals both of the Federal authorities and manufacturers.

Call money loaned as low as 4¾ per cent. and the renewal rate of 5 per cent. indicated a substantial easement in the money market. Whether the lower rates are likely to prevail for some time is a question which cannot be answered. The course of industrial stocks was marked by considerable irregularity, with the major trend upward. It was noticeable that the preferred stocks of some of the steel and equipment companies, by moving upward rather sharply, reflected the increased assets being put behind them by large earnings.

LONDON MARKET IS CHEERFUL.

Operators Cautious About Extending Their Commitments.

LONDON, July 29.—The stock market resumed cheerfully today without any increase in business. Operators are cautious about extending commitments materially pending developments in the war theatre.

Meanwhile dealers raise values on the least indication of buying, resulting in firmness in all sections. Argentine rails and mining and oil shares were the best features today. Spanish stocks were good on an improvement in the lire.

Money was in fair supply and discount rates were quiet.

Prices Firm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, July 29.—Prices were firm on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 61 francs 85 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 70 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Market Easier—Call Loans Renewed at 5%, Range Being 4¾ to 6%.

Money was somewhat easier yesterday. The published renewal rate for call loans was 5 per cent., the lowest in some time past. For a brief part of the session new borrowings were made at from 4¾ to 5 per cent., but the closing quotation was 6 per cent., the high for the day. The time money market was unchanged, 6 per cent. being charged, with few transactions placed at 5¾ per cent. in the case of sixty-day loans.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Packing House Financing.

It was learned yesterday that Wilson & Co., one of the large packing houses, has under consideration a plan for some new financing. The details of the proposed issue have not been determined, but it is understood that a group of bankers is engaged in making the arrangements. Wilson & Co. will be the third of the well-known packing concerns to sell securities within the past six weeks. First, came Armour & Co. which sold $60,000,000 of 6 per cent. serial debentures, maturing from 1919 to 1924 at prices to yield from 6¾ to 7¼ per cent.; and then there was announced the sale of $10,000,000 five-year 7 per cent sinking fund notes of the Cudahy Packing Company at 98, the yield being about 7½ per cent. All of these companies are supplying the Government with beef.

Farm Loan Act Attacked.

The Farm Mortgage Bankers Association of America with headquarters in Chicago, has issued an attack on the Farm Loan act, based on the fact that the Federal Land Bank bonds are tax-exempt. It points out that the rich men of the country are buying the bonds for the purpose of escaping taxation, and suggests that the tax-exemption feature of the law be repealed. "Friends of the Federal Farm Loan System claim that the tax exemption feature of the law benefits the farm borrower an average of half of 1 per cent. or $5 per per year on a $1,000 loan," says the association, which adds: "The benefit to the very rich income tax slacker is $31 per year on a $1,000 bond, $6.20 for every dollar of benefit received by the farmer. No patriotic farmer would ask the Government to make such a bad bargain in war times. No true friend of the system will try to defend such financing. As it is expected that the Federal Land Bank bonds will increase at a rate of over $100,000,000 annually, the tax burden will be enormous that will be thus accumulated on the people of moderate means through the tax exemption benefit given by the law to the multi-millionaire tax slackers. This gross pervision of the law is incidental to war changes in financial conditions. No one is to blame. It was not contemplated by those who originally framed the Federal Farm Loan law. Congress can easily and quickly remedy the defect."

Friday of last week was the banner day in the Thrift campaign. Sales of War Savings and Thrift Stamps on that day broke all previous records, the total for the country being $21,068,053. This is equivalent to an average of about 21 cents for every man, woman and child in the United States. The total sales to date are placed at $493,007,039.

Bank Profiteering in England.

According to cable advices from London the British Government has decided to prosecute a well-known banking institution for the consummation of a transaction in violation of the Orders in Council. It appears that the alleged illicit transaction consisted of the purchase of British Treasury bills and the resale or rediscount of the same to the end that the deal operated unfavorably against the maintenance of sterling exchange rates between England and the United States. It is presumed that the offending institution bought the 6 per cent. British Treasury bills that are regularly offered in this market.

General Motors' Short Sales.

The action of General Motors yesterday had some of the earmarks of speculative operations on the short side. The abrupt decline of 9 points followed a sharp recession on Saturday when it became known that the Capital Issues Committee had approved the corporation's application to increase its stock. On the assumption that the floating supply would be shortly increased, a short sale would be the logical thing for a speculator to make, and the chances for a profit would be in his favor if any ordinary stock were concerned. General Motors, however, has long been out of the ordinary class of speculative issues, as many traders on the short side have discovered through expensive experiences. The shares are rather closely held by large interests, and there is no assurance yet that General Motors will be any more plentiful than before when the company's plans are worked out.

Steel Directors Meet Today.

Directors of the Steel Corporation meet this afternoon to act on the dividends and make public the second quarter's earnings. Gossip in the Street for some days past has indicated a widespread belief that the extra common stock disbursement of 3 per cent. would again be voted. Estimates on earnings have been few because of the unknown factor of tax reservations.

Chemical Company's Earnings.

The Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company's statement for 1917 is expected in a few days. Earnings are known to have been considerably larger than in 1916, and predictions that a balance of more than $20 per share of common stock will be shown were heard in the financial district yesterday. In 1916 the balance was a little less than $11 a share. Times have been good for all the makers of fertilizers during the war period, and their by-products have commanded high prices.

Pierce Oil Expansion.

The Pierce Oil Corporation is enlarging its facilities, the expansion program being, in part, a product of the entrance of new interests and additional capital into the organization a few weeks ago. The refineries are handling more than 27,000 barrels of petroleum daily, it was learned yesterday, compared with about 20,000 barrels last April. The plans for increased operations provide for the refining of 30,000 barrels daily early next month.

Cotton Retains Equilibrium.

For three successive sessions the local cotton market has now remained almost totally unchanged, the shifts of a few points up or down in the active months being without significance where they have not neutralized each other. There have been some fluctuations during sessions, but nobody has taken them seriously. There is a Government report on the crop condition and forecast coming on Thursday, and the market is waiting for that, but beyond this the remarkable steadiness of prices is generally attributed to a big short interest, which will not let them sag off, while in the dullness of the market there is nothing to put them up.

Interborough Financing.

Nothing definite, so far as could be ascertained yesterday, has as yet been done toward putting out the new bonds of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company which the Public Service Commision has authorized. The Interborough's bankers stand ready to go ahead with plans as soon as the company says the word, but the company itself has not yet made up its mind what it wants to do.

Southern Pacific Steamers.

Among the minor features of the Southern Pacific's annual report is a brief allusion to the taking over of the company's fleet of passenger steamers, one of which, the Antilles, was the first American transport to be sunk in the war. The report follows the example of most steamship companies in listing only the charter hire of these steamers, and ignoring the still unsettled question of the commission to be paid for the operation of such ships as the company is running for Government account. It is, incidentally, just short of a year since the Shipping Board first announced its intention of commandeering all American steamers over 2,500 tons, but this question of the operating fee is apparently just as far from settlement as ever. The sums owing to shipping companies from the Shipping Board are hardly comparable with those owing railroad companies from the Railroad Administration, but they form a respectable total none the less. The 37,088 stockholders of the Southern Pacific form a small fraction of the total number of persons interested in this question.

B. & O. Financing.

Various rumors were abroad yesterday, the day on which the notes fell due, regarding the manner in which the Baltimore & Ohio extended its $8,000,000, by bank loans or by straight extensions. Regardless of the exact method employed, it is certain that the extension was managed by a banking house in close touch with B. & O. affairs, and that there will be no considerable B. & O. financing until well along in the Fall.

SO. PACIFIC REPORTS $13,706,902 NET GAIN

EXPENSES ARE KEPT DOWN

Probably the most remarkable report of earnings made by any important American railroad system in 1918 is contained in the annual report of the Southern Pacific Company and its subsidiaries for the calendar year 1917, published yesterday.

This reveals that the Southern Pacific, almost alone among the great railroads of the country, not only equaled, but exceeded, under the difficult conditions of the first year of war, the earnings made in 1916 the most prosperous year from nearly every standpoint which the railroads had ever enjoyed. Practically every other big railroad, reporting for 1917, showed increases in the gross revenues compared with 1916, but at the same time, owing to heavy increases in operating expenses, showed declines in both net revenues and operating income. The income of the New York Central, for instance, was cut almost exactly in half.

The Southern Pacific, however, not only increased its gross revenues by $30,544,066, but kept down its expenses so successfully that its net revenues showed an increase of $13,030,980, and despite tax increases of more than $5,000,000, its total operating income increased $13,070,611; its gross corporate income $12,212,527, and net corporate income by $13,706,902, this last being equivalent to $17.65 a share on the $272,823,405 of capital stock outstanding. The balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1917, shows a total corporate surplus of $250,935,823, equal to more than 90 per cent. of the par value of the stock outstanding.

In every respect it was a banner year for the Southern Pacific. The following table gives the outstanding features of the income account for 1917 as compared with 1916, the figures for 1917 representing, in each instance, the largest reported in the company's history.

The explanation of the company's phenomenal growth of business during the year, given in the report by Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Executive Committee, includes the following points: Revenues from passenger business increased as a result of the transportation of troops and the industrial activity stimulated by the war, the revenue from these sources having more than counterbalanced the falling off in tourist travel. In express and mail service revenues, increased volume more than offset decreases in mail compensation.

Agricultural products yielded an increase of $4,277,978, chiefly derived from barley, fruits and vegetables, and rice, now a staple crop in California. Forest products contributed an increase of $2,349,020, owing to wooden ship construction and the development of army cantonments, combined with the decrease in sea transportation via the Panama Canal, which threw more business on the Southern Pacific. Manufactured products increased $6,439,842, and mine products $5,083,871, mostly fuel oil, coal, sulphur, and bullion.

This great and steady increase in the volume of traffic, it is explained, enabled the road to put into operation such economies in handling it as to offset the great increases in the cost of labor, material and supplies. These increases are attributed by the report—$6,100,000 to higher cost of fuel, $3,690,000 to higher cost of other materials, $1,711,000 to increases required by the Adamson law, $3,369,000 to other increases in wages. Regarding the economies effected, the report says the saving through heavier train load was equivalent to the operation of 2,190,462 train miles, and four trains in 1917 did the work of five in 1916. The ton mileage of revenue freight moved per freight car on the line increased 79.62 per cent., this being equivalent to adding 40,000 freight cars, worth $100,000,000, to the equipment.

$250,000,000 LOAN BY JAPAN TO SIBERIA?

Said to Have Been Granted to Omsk Government for Formation of Strong Army.

STOCKHOLM, July 29, (British Admiralty Per Wireless Press.)—The official organ of the Siberian Government, published at Omsk, stated on July 12 that Japan had granted to the Siberian Government a loan of $250,000,000 for the formation of a strong army. In return Siberia undertakes to supply Japanese troops which arrive there with provisions.

It is also announced that the Siberian Government is carrying on negotiations with America.

VLADIVOSTOK, July 28, (Associated Press.)—A proclamation issued by General Horvath, who recently assumed the dictatorship of Siberia, was published here today. It orders all official administrative, judicial, financial, and other departments in the Maritime Province to take up their duties, referring where necessary to General Horvath's Cabinet.

As many of the departments have been in abeyance for some months the order may force an issue between the Government of General Horvath and the Provisional Siberian Government.

EIGHT STEEL VESSELS TURNED OUT IN WEEK

American Yards in Same Period Launched Ten Steel and Five Wooden Ships.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Eight steel ships, with a total deadweight tonnage of 85,890, were delivered by American shipyards last week, the Shipping Board announced today. Launchings for the week included ten steel vessels, with a total tonnage of 53,250, and five wooden ships, with a tonnage of 19,200.

Shipyards on the Great Lakes led in deliveries with four vessels. Pacific Coast yards turned out three ships, while the single Eastern delivery was a 7,400-ton freighter from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation's Sparrow's Point, Md., yard. These deliveries bring the number of vessels built for the Shipping Board to nearly 250, with a million and a half deadweight tonnage.

Among the launchings last week seven were at Pacific Coast yards, six at lake yards, and one each at Gulf and Atlantic Coast yards.

VIRGINIA CHEMICAL PROFITS

Earns 24 Per Cent. on Common and 8 Per Cent. on Preferred Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 29.—Samuel T. Morgan, head of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company, announced today that figures just compiled for the fiscal year show that the business done by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company was in excess of $122,000,000. The net earnings will provide for a payment of 24 per cent. on the $28,000,000 common stock and 8 per cent. on the $20,000,000 preferred stock of the corporation. Demands for war supplies are one of the factors in the increase.

"The war has produced many curious changes," said President Morgan. "We used to get a lot of potash from the mines in Germany—our own mines, by the way—but war cut off that supply, so that we are now getting potash from Utah and other Western States, and we are limiting its use to crops that absolutely require potash, such as tobacco for instance. The problem of providing sufficient fertilizer with which to produce crops in America is a serious one, and has taxed the ingenuity and productive powers of the best experts. However, we have met the situation and have been able to provide products whereby the American farmer has greatly increased the output of his lands and has increased the supplies for our boys at the front and our allies."

The Savage Arms Corporation, for the three months ended June 30, 1918, reports earnings of $3,094,669, compared with $2,324,595 for the previous quarter. The balance, after deduction of fixed charges, taxes, &c., was $450,603, equivalent to $5.17 a share on 87,155 shares of common stock as against $411,885, the equivalent of $4.72 a share, earned during the quarter ending March 31.

PROPOSED LOANS TO CHINA APPROVED

State Department Announces Support of Advance by Bankers Said to Total $50,000,000.

DONE AS A WAR MEASURE

This Government to Supervise Terms—Britain, Japan, and France Invited to Participate.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The new policy of approving loans by American bankers to China, so that nation may be the better able to defend itself against enemy forces approaching its borders, was announced today by the State Department. No specific amount was announced, but it is understood that $50,000,000 will be advanced.

By the terms of the agreement between the bankers and the State Department the former will consist of representatives from different parts of the country; will co-operate with the Government and follow the policies outlined by the department, and will submit for approval the names of the banks composing the group to make the loan and also the terms and conditions of any loans.

For its part the department gives assurance that if the terms and conditions of the loan are accepted by the United States and China, "the Government will be willing to aid in every way possible and to make prompt and vigorous representations and to take every possible step to insure the execution of equitable contracts made in good faith by citizens in foreign lands."

The department also announced that it was hoped that the American bankers would be associated with bankers of Great Britain, Japan, and France, and negotiations looking to such co-operation now are in progress between the United States and those Governments.

The Official Announcement.

Acting Secretary Polk made this formal announcement:

"China declared war against German very largely because of the action of the United States. Therefore this Government has felt a special interest in the desire of China so to equip herself as to be of more specific assistance in the war against the Central Powers.

"Until the present time the engagements of the United States in preparing to exert effectively its strength in the European theatre of war has operated to prevent specific constructive steps to help China realize her desires. Recently, however, this Government felt that, because of the approach to Chinese territory of the scenes of disorder, a special effort should be made to place proper means at the disposal of China. Consequently a number of American bankers, who had been interested in the past in making loans to China and who had had experience in the Orient, were called to Washington and asked to become interested in the matter. The bankers responded very promptly and an agreement has been reached between them and the Department of State which has the following salient features:

"First—The formation of a group of American bankers to make a loan or loans and to consist of representatives from different parts of the country.

"Second—An assurance on the part of the bankers that they will co-operate with the Government and follow the policies outlined by the Department of State.

"Third—Submission of the names of the banks who will compose the group for approval by the Department of State.

"Fourth—Submission of the terms and conditions of any loan or loans for approval by the Department of State.

"Fifth—Assurances that, if the terms and conditions of the loan are accepted by this Government and by the Government to which the loan is made, in order to encourage and facilitate the free intercourse between American citizens and foreign States which is mutually advantageous, the Government will be willing to aid in every way possible and to make prompt and vigorous representations and to take every possible step to insure the execution of equitable contracts made in good faith by its citizens in foreign lands.

"It is hoped that the American group will be associated with bankers of Great Britain, Japan, and France. Negotiations are now in progress between the Government of the United States and those Governments which it is hoped will result in their co-operation and in the participation by the bankers of those countries in equal parts in any loan which may be made.

"Besides the war-like conditions which confront China on her northern and western borders, there is a further incentive to co-operate with all these Governments because the war has created a community of interest between them and their citizens and those of other Governments, and has broken down barriers which once have existed and has made easier the intercourse between them. It is hoped that if the project succeeds it will serve as an agency through which this community of interest and the consequent expansion of our mutual interests abroad may be adequately and properly expressed."

News Welcomed in China.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, July 29.—News that the Washington Government had agreed to the American bankers' loan to China is welcomed here, not only as an indication of American interest in China, but also as ending the period of frenzied finance. Though fifty millions in gold, the amount mentioned, is insufficient for the cancellation of outstanding loans, the news is also welcomed as terminating Japanese financial domination.

One company of French troops and four Annamite companies entrained for Shanghai, whence they will embark for Vladivostok. Pao-ku-ci-ching, the Tuchun of Sei-Lung-Kiang, has been appointed commander of the Chinese expedition to Vladivostok.

Bankers Ready to Proceed.

Five or six weeks ago leading bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan, were called to Washington to confer in regard to the proposed loan to China. Since then a number of conferences have been held both here and in Washington, some of which have been attended by Breckinridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State.

From the outset the bankers advised the State Department that they would arrange for a loan, provided they received proper co-operation and support from the Government. Satisfactory assurances have been received, and the bankers are now ready to go ahead with the work of framing the terms of the loan.

Bankers here are pleased that the Government has reversed itself from the policy enunciated by William Jennings Bryan, who, as Secretary of State, denounced "dollar diplomacy" and forced American interests to retire from the Six-Power Group.

Bankers in Great Britain, France, and Japan have been kept informed of the progress of the conversations with the State Department. Although England and France are to be parties to the proposed loan, the funds will be furnished practically exclusively by American and Japanese bankers.

J. P. Morgan & Co., who, it is expected, will head the American group of financial interests participating in the loan, have forwarded to the State Department a list of banks and banking houses, located in various parts of the country, who are interested in China and would take part in the proposed financing.

Shattuck Copper Report.

For the quarter ended June 30, 1918, the Shattuck Arizona Copper Company reports net income of $546,480 compared with $1,262,503 for the corresponding period last year, and expenses and depreciation of $429,597 as against $601,771 last year. The net income for the three months amounted to $116,883, equivalent to 33 cents a share ($10 par value) on $3,500,000 capital stock, compared with $660,732, or $1.88 during the corresponding period in 1917.

COTTON SELLS OFF FROM 2 TO 9 POINTS

Hot weather, both in Texas and on the floor of the Exchange, formed the principal subject of interest on the local cotton market yesterday. The temperature at the ringside, combined with a general absence of any features of pressing interest, produced a listless session, in which prices moved down from a steady opening to a low point, early in the morning, about 30 points down, and then moved back up again to close about where they started, without anybody getting unduly excited either on the way down or on the way back. The close was steady, unchanged to 14 points decline, and the decline was only in the late and inactive months, in these, moreover, doing little more than offset Saturday's small gains.

One sale of August on the opening put that month down 26 points, but the active months were only off from 2 to 9 points on the first call. They held up after a fashion until reports of scattering rains in Texas, with the thinness of the market, sufficed to move them off. Short covering was sufficient to bring them back again. It is the general belief that there is still a very big short interest in the market, and that it is beginning to feel a trifle uneasy.

The Government crop report on condition and indicated yield is due on Thursday, and until then the market is expected to adopt a waiting attitude. The expectation is of a considerable deterioration, perhaps 7 or 8 percentage points, but still not enough to put the crop down to the ten-year average. At the same time the question of shipping facilities, both within the country and abroad, is exciting fully as much interest as the crop prospects.

STEEL MEN CONFER ON NATION'S NEEDS

DEMAND IS INCREASING

Specific Allotments to Essential and Nonessential Industries Likely to be Made.

Ways and means for speeding up steel production and distributing it rapidly to the shipyards and munition plants were discussed at a meeting yesterday of Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board; Charles M. Schwab, Director of the Emergency Fleet Corporation; J. L. Replogle, Steel Administrator, and the leading steelmakers of the country in the offices of the Steel Corporation. Important results from the conference, it is expected, will be announced at Washington later in the week. The data presented by the steel men on output, present and prospective, are to be gone over by the War Industries Board and representatives of the various Government departments which are handling manufacturing and construction connected with the war, and afterward the allocation of the country's steel between the essential and less essential industries is to be announced.

Mr. Replogle said he believed that it would be possible for specific tonnages to be decided upon for the munition plants, the shipyards, the railroads, and other essential consumers for the next six months. What was left over, he said, would be apportioned among the other industries, and, while he was not certain that definite amounts for the six months' period could be named by the War Industries Board, he felt that the totals could be so nearly approximated, as the result of the consultations to be held today and tomorrow in Washington, that the less essential industries could tell about where they would stand in respect to steel supplies from now to the end of the year.

Mr. Hurley came to the meeting unexpectedly, as his primary purpose in visiting New York was to consult with P. A. S. Franklin, Chairman of the Shipping Control Committee of the Shipping Board. There was nothing formal about the gathering. Mr. Schwab got down to shirtsleeves as soon as he entered the room, and it was evident when the men left after the session ended that they had turned over a large amount of work despite the heat. Those who attended were E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Steel Corporation, who left before the meeting was over; James A. Farrell, President of the Steel Corporation; John A. Topping, Chairman of the Republic Iron and Steel Company; F. A. S. Clarke, President of the Lackawanna Steel Company; E. G. Grace, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation; A. C. Dinkey, President of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company; H. G. Dalton of Pickands, Mather & Co., and J. A. Bonner, who represents the American Iron and Steel Institute at Washington.

Wants Steel for Ships.

Mr. Hurley said after the meeting that the matter of adequate steel supply for shipbuilding purposes was what interested him the most at the meeting.

"We have gone ahead rapidly in turning out ships," he said, "and we are planning to increase the speed of output. This will need more and more steel, and we desired to let the steel manufacturers know something of our plans, so that materials will be ready at the yards as rapidly as needed."

Mr. Schwab supplemented Mr. Hurley's statement by saying that the original estimates of steel consumption by the shipbuilders had proved far too low when the work got well under way, and it was realized that a vast amount of the country's full output of material available for ship construction would have to be sent to the yards for some time to come in order to meet the demand.

"How much steel do you think you will need for the next six months for the shipyards?" Mr. Schwab was asked.

"All I can get," he replied, laughing, "and I am looking to Replogle to see that I get it first."

Mr. Replogle said he would see to that, and added:

"The meeting was one of the series we have been having to promote co-operation among the manufacturers and the Government for the purpose of getting out the steel and having it delivered where it is most needed. The total output of steel is large enough to meet all needs connected with the war, as far as we can see them now. It is not so much a question of quantity as it is of getting adequate amounts of steel in the shape required. A bar mill cannot roll ship plates and a plate mill is not able to roll shell bars.

Demand for Steel Increasing.

"The use of steel in the war has increased beyond the estimates which were made even a few weeks ago. The demand is constantly expanding. The present offensive in France, as you can easily see, is using up thousands of tons of steel in shells and supplies, and the fluctuations in consumption must continue until the war ends. In addition to the enormous amount of steel being used daily in the shipyards, we must keep before us all the time the necessity of building up stocks at the yards so that bad weather in the Winter may not slow down work on the new vessels."

Mr. Replogle declined to estimate the amount of steel which would be allotted to particular industries, as the automobile trade. He said the totals would be prepared within a day or two.

In talking with the reporters, Mr. Schwab said he desired to deny with all possible emphasis reports which had come to his ears that friction existed between himself and Mr. Hurley and Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board.

"We are working together in full sympathy and with full co-operation," he said, "and we believe we are getting good results."

GRATON & KNIGHT NOTES.

National City Company Offers to Public $3,000,000 Issue.

The National City Company is offering $3,000,000 of 7 per cent. notes of the Graton & Knight Manufacturing Company, due serially from Aug. 1, 1919, to 1921, at prices ranging from 98 to 99½, the yield being from about 7½ to slightly more than 7¾ per cent. The series "C" notes are convertible at their face value into an equivalent par value of 7 per cent. cumulative second preferred stock.

The Graton & Knight Manufacturing Company, which has its principal plant in Worcester, Mass., is said to be the largest manufacturer of leather belting in the world. President W. M. Spaulding states that more than 75 per cent. of the orders on hand is for the Government.

The notes will be the only obligation of the company in the hands of the public. They will be secured by pledges of the parent corporation and its constituent companies, which agree to mainain an excess of current assets over all current liabilities, equal to at least 200 per cent. of the face value of the notes outstanding at any time, and, furthermore, agree to maintain current assets at an aggregate amount equal to at least 175 per cent. of all liabilities.

A day-by-day summary of all the news that has appeared in the columns of The New York Times for the entire war period is carefully arranged in a single alphabet, with full cross references, in the volumes of The New York Times Index. Current copy sent for examination.—Advt.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed firm and dull. Final quotations showed general improvement, with a majority of the active issues about the high levels of the session. Trading throughout the day was light and restricted to a few stocks, the market being narrow in tone. An encouraging feature of an otherwise dispirited market was the interest displayed in the railroad shares, which have been neglected in the recent trading.

Stabilizes Business

American Credit Insurance takes the complexity and danger out of credits and collections—carries into business a promise of indemnity against the unexpected—affords comfort, serenity and security at a cost far less than the benefit conferred and the losses avoided. It gives to mercantile affairs increased security and stability.

The American's Unlimited Policy not only insures against abnormal credit losses; it serves to prevent losses. It provides for the collection of all covered accounts not over 45 days past due, or the loss is provable under the bond.

GERMAN CHEMICAL PLANT IS SEIZED

A. Mitchell Palmer Takes Over Heyden Works at Garfield, N. J.

TO 'AMERICANIZE' FORMULAS

A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, announced yesterday that he had taken over the Heyden Chemical Works with its large plant at Garfield, N. J., on evidence showing that this concern, the second largest corporation of its kind in this country, was German owned. In 1917 it did a business of $4,000,000, and according to Francis P. Garvan, Director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Alien Property Custodian's office, the real owner of the company was Fabrik von Heyden of Radebeul, Germany, the largest chemical concern in the world. Mr. Garvan announced yesterday that "an attempt to camouflage the real ownership of the company had been made by George Simon, representative of the German company in this country, with the aid of T. Ellett Hodgskin, a New York attorney."

The Heyden Chemical Works has the exclusive use in this country of many valuable patents, processes, and formulas for the making of salol, sodium salicylate, saccharine, formaldehyde, benzoate of soda, and other by-products of carbolic acid. With the seizure of the works, the Alien Property Custodian's office will proceed to the "Americanization" of all these patents, processes, and formulas.

T. Ellett Hodgskin, who is charged with assisting in the attempt to conceal the real ownership of the company, is an attorney with an office at 20 Nassau Street. Not only did Hodgskin as counsel arrange originally for the masking of the German ownership in the company, but, according to Mr. Garvan, he caused himself to be elected President by the Board of Directors, while he at the same time represented various other German interests in this country, such as the Bauer Chemical Company and the Jaeger Sanitary Woolen System, which have already been taken over by Mr. Palmer.

According to the discoveries made by Mr. Garvan, George Simon, the American representative of the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden, with the aid of Hodgskin sought to "Americanize" the Heyden works by an alleged purchase for $149,000 of the 745 shares of stock owned by the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden, the ownership of which in 1916 netted the German company $1,026,626 royalties and profits. The money to finance this alleged sale of stock from the German company was supplied by Richard Kny, father-in-law of Simon.

Organized Chemical Works.

George Simon, who lives in Brooklyn, and is a German subject, came to this country in 1900 as the agent of the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden, and organized the Heyden Chemical Works, with a capitalization of $10,000. Later the capital stock was increased to $150,000. The stock was divided into 750 shares, of which the German company received 745 shares for the patents, processes, formulas, &c., which they made over to the Heyden company. In the contract entered into between the German and the American company it was agreed that 8 per cent. be guaranteed on the stock, thereby canceling large royalties and profits of the German concern. This contract recognized the property rights of the German concern. In 1915 the royalties paid to the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden were $820,603, and in 1916 the royalties and participation of profits for the German company jumped to $1,026,626.

According to Mr. Garvan, Simon under cross-examination, admitted that the Heyden Chemical Works was owned by the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden. He said that the concern was reorganized, however, so as to hide the German ownership, the original steps in this direction being taken in 1916, when the relations between this country and Germany began to look threatening. Simon said he sought the advice of T. Ellett Hodgskin at the time, and together they communicated with the von Heyden people in Berlin for the taking over of the corporation by the American stockholders and Director.

Simon admitted also that he went abroad for the purpose of ascertaining the wishes of the German company looking to safeguard their interests in this country because the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden had lost all of its property and holdings both in England and Japan on account of the war. On his return to this country he arranged for the purchase by Hodgskin of the 745 shares of the Heyden concern owned by the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden. Simon told Mr. Garvan that he was desirous of obtaining the stock for himself, but inasmuch as he was a German subject he realized he could not "accomplish the purpose he had in mind." Mr. Garvan described the negotiations by which the German ownership was camouflaged as follows:

"On April 29, 1916, Hodgskin made his alleged purchase of the 745 shares of the German-owned stock in the Heyden Chemical Company for $149,000, which was at par value. Through Simon he borrowed the $149,000 to pay for it from Richard Kny of Brooklyn, who is Simon's father-in-law. As collateral for the loan Hodgskin gave Kny a certificate for 745 shares. To protect the German ownership of the Heyden company, however, Simon got Hodgskin to write a letter to him wherein Hodgskin agreed to sell back the stock to the German interests at any time within eighteen months for the sum of $149,000 with interest.

Turned Over All the Stock.

"One phase, however, had apparently been overlooked by Hodgskin and was not discovered by him until the latter part of the year 1917. The contract between the Chemische Fabrik von Heyden and the Heyden Chemical Works, wherein the valuable processes, patents, and formulas were turned over to the American Company, provided that the duration of the contract be unlimited unless either party gave six months' notice of his desire to terminate it. Accordingly on Dec. 18, 1917, Hodgskin called a meeting of the Directors of the Heyden Chemical Works and caused a resolution to be adopted whereby the contract of June 7, 1906, between the two companies be canceled as of Dec. 31, 1916. By this time Hodgskin had not only obtained control of the company but had caused himself to be elected President by the Board of Directors and fixed his salary at $16,000 per annum. This was the status of the company when the Bureau of Investigation of the Alien Property Custodian began its investigation."

It was pointed out by Mr. Garvan that this action was illegal, and on July 12, 1918, the Board of Directors adopted a resolution rescinding the resolution of Dec. 18, 1917, and reinstating the original contract of June 7, 1906. On July 12, 1918, Hodgskin turned over to Richard Kny all the stock standing in his name in consideration of the canceling of the loan certificate for 745 shares of stock which was issued by Richard Kny.

Richard Kny claims that he in good faith in 1916 loaned $149,000 to Hodgskin so that Hodgskin might "purchase" the company, and Simon and Kny both told Mr. Garvan that this money was transmitted to Germany. Richard Kny has surrendered to the Alien Property Custodian the certificate of 745 shares of stock issued to him, and has formally turned over the company to the Alien Property Custodian.

Mr. Palmer has appointed the following Directors and officers of the company: President—Leroy Baldwin, President Empire Trust Company, 120 Broadway; Vice President—James A. Branegan, chemist, 1421 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia; Secretary—F. N. B. Close, Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street; Counsel—J. Harry Covington, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and Royal H. Weller, ex-Assistant District Attorney, of 31 Nassau Street, New York.

FOREIGN TEXTILES ON VIEW.

Commerce Bureau Arranges Exhibit to Aid Our Manufacturers.

The New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce announced yesterday that, with a view to putting the American textile trade in a position to meet European and other competition in foreign markets, it had placed on exhibition in Room 734 of the Custom House comprehensive samples of foreign-made fabrics collected by special agents of the Government.

The exhibit consists of samples of cotton goods and woolens from most of the importing countries of the world, its object being to illustrate the various grades and styles of textiles in demand. Most of the goods shown were made in England, although fabrics from France, Germany, and the Netherlands are well represented in the collection.

According to T. O. Klath, commercial agent in charge of the bureau's exhibit room, the textile exhibit contains more than 2,000 samples, arranged in books. Clippings from each sample may be had upon application by textile commission houses, manufacturers, and exporters.

American Praise for British Sergeant

LONDON, July 29.—The American headquarters in London has issued a general order "to express great admiration of the heroic action by an English Sergeant, G. Davis, who on July 8 jeopardized his own life by diving into the water from a Liverpool dock to rescue an American soldier who had fallen overboard from a transport and who would otherwise have been drowned as he was encumbered with full equipment."

PHILADELPHIA-N. Y. CITY TRAVEL BOOK FOR $31.86

Railroad Administration Says Heavy War Traffic Makes Commutation Tickets Necessary.

It was announced last night for the Railroad Administration that the volume of traffic required by war business had made it necessary to begin on Aug. 1 issuing monthly commutation books for use on the railroads between New York and Philadelphia. The announcement said:

"To accommodate the greatly increased travel between Philadelphia and New York and to provide a basis of fare especially adapted to passengers whose business requires daily, or very frequent, trips, a monthly commutation rate between the two cities will be established, effective on and after Aug. 1.

"The new rate will apply on the Pennsylvania Railroad between the Broad Street Station, West Philadelphia, or North Philadelphia and the Hudson Terminal and ferry stations in New York City. On the joint route of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway and Central Railroad of New Jersey it will be effective between the Reading Terminal, Columbia Avenue, Wayne Junction, and Jenkintown in Philadelphia, and any of the stations of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in New York City.

"The new ticket will be sold for $31.86, and will be good for fifty-four one-way rides in any one calendar month. To guard against misuse of the ticket, the holder will be required to provide a photograph of himself, measuring not more than one and one-eighth inches square, which will be attached to the ticket and stamped, for purposes of identification.

"The new tickets will be placed on sale not later than the evening of July 31. Those good for use via the Pennsylvania Railroad will be obtainable at the Broad Street Station, West Philadelphia, North Philadelphia, and 1539 Chestnut Street, in Philadelphia, and at all stations in New York City. Those good via the Philadelphia & Reading Railway and Central Railroad of New Jersey will be on sale at the Reading Terminal and 1579 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, and at all stations of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in New York City.

"The tickets will not be interchangeable. Those reading via the Pennsylvania Railroad will be good over that line only. Those reading via the Philadelphia & Reading Railway and Central Railroad of New Jersey will be accepted only over that route."

Receiver for Nat Goodwin's Property

A receiver for the property of Nat C. Goodwin, actor, in supplementary proceedings, was appointed yesterday by City Court Justice Schmuck on the application of Isaac L. Silverberg, who got a judgment for $1,698 against the actor on notes given in part payment for ranch land in California. The judgment creditor asked the court to name the receiver to look after the payment to Goodwin of the $15,374 judgment obtained in his breach of contract suit against the Mirror Films Company. The creditor also alleged that Goodwin, who is now in California, will appear again in "Why Marry?" this week.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Relieves Impossible Condition.

The recent ruling of the Shipping Control Committee, providing that the names of all ships assigned to New York steamship companies be posted in the Produce Exchange, is hailed by local exporters and freight brokerage houses as a relief from an almost impossible condition. Until this order became effective, it was necessary to call up, or otherwise communicate with, every steamship company in the city until one was found which had been assigned a ship for operation to the desired port of destination. This entailed no end of time, worry and wasted energy, all of which is now done away with.

Linen Substitutes Selling.

Business in table damask has become very active during the last few weeks and retailers in a great many parts of the country are reported to be seeking supplies for immediate or nearby delivery, with the result that mills are now pretty well sold out for the next month or two. A number of other cotton fabrics which may be substituted for linen are also in demand, though retail merchants as a rule prefer to take these goods on a hand-to-mouth basis, rather than to load up for any time ahead. But, even so, orders are mounting up very rapidly, and sellers appear well satisfied with the total volume of business to date.

Fall Shoes Are Scarce.

Late buyers seeking shoes for next Fall are reported to be finding it very difficult to obtain supplies. There are very few mills left which have anything to offer in the way of Fall goods. With their present curtailed production due to the labor situation, they have sold their entire output for many months to come. Stocks in the hands of jobbers offer nothing in the way of quantity or assortment compared to normal years. The result is that those merchants who refused to heed the many warnings earlier in the season of an impending scarcity are coming to regret the skepticism.

Pile Fabrics in Coats.

A great many buyers are said to be very favorably inclined toward pile fabric coats for women for next Fall. Models made up of these materials, including heavy plushes, velvets and corduroys, have figured prominently in the orders already placed, and in the opinion of several manufacturers will continue among the leaders while the season lasts. Then, again, heavy plushes are being used quite extensively in many Fall lines to replace fur for trimming. This is being done with considerable success, even in some of the high-priced lines.

Burlaps Quiet, but Strong.

Burlaps of the heavier weights have become rather scarce in the local market, with the result that they command a slight premium here. Though there has been no great activity for a week or two, 10½-ounce burlaps are quoted around 25 cents in the East, as compared to 23 cents on the Pacific Coast. In the case of 10-ounce goods there is the same differential of 2 cents, the prices being 24½ cents and 22½ cents for the East and West, respectively. It is said that, if buyers will accept five or six weeks' deliveries, much better prices can be obtained.

⁂

Paper Prices Advancing.

During the last week or ten days there has been further buying activity in the local paper market, and prices have advanced to new high levels. Bond paper has gone to 16 cents a pound, and manila wrapping paper in sheets is 7 cents and in rolls 6 cents a pound. Newsprint in sheets has gone up as high, in some cases, as 6 cents a pound. Supplies of practically all grades of paper, however, have become so scarce that the present prices must be considered as little more than nominal, it being almost impossible to get any large quantities at the prices quoted. Mills are entirely sold out for months ahead, and will only accept future business on open orders.

Gray Goods Market Fairly Active.

There was quite some activity yesterday in the local market for gray goods. Buyers seemed fairly anxious for supplies, and the result was a substantial trade in sateens, twills, and fine goods at market prices, subject, however, to prices to be fixed later by the Government. Sheetings from first hands were active at the Government prices. The most sought constructions were 36-inch 5.50s, 36-inch 5s and 31-inch 5s. There was also some very good buying in printcloths of 38½-inch 64-60s at fixed prices. Second hands were rather quiet, though there was a little business transacted at irregular prices.

Situation in Hosiery.

There are as yet no signs of relief from the scarcity of supplies in hosiery lines, and many buyers are said to be returning home without much needed merchandise. As yet, mills are not willing to consider Spring business, due to the uncertainty as to what prices they will have to pay for yarns, both cotton and silk. There are practically no mills in the country which have anything further to offer in the way of Fall merchandise, and, though jobbers are fairly well supplied just now, it is not expected that these stocks will be sufficient to last out the season. Silk hose for women, in lines to retail for from $1 to $1.25, are in greater demand, it is said, than anything else, and seem to be the hardest to obtain.

NEW CHILD LABOR BILL.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—President Wilson, at a conference today with Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, discussed child labor legislation proposed as a substitute for the law recently declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The case of Thomas J. Mooney, California labor leader, sentenced to be executed Dec. 13, also was discussed, Mr. Gompers said.

The President expressed a deep interest in the proposed child labor legislation, according to Mr. Gompers, and considered it especially necessary during the coming years, when the health and lives of children must be guarded, in order to make up for the losses sustained in the war. Mr. Gompers, after the conference, expressed the belief that a bill in accordance with the Supreme Court decision, would be introduced shortly after Congress met after its recess.

Mr. Gompers declined to state the views he presented in the Mooney case, further than to say that in discussing it with President Wilson, he appeared as a representative of labor.

NAME QUEENS DEMOCRATS.

Dr. Keating, Deposed Leader, to Fight the Connolly Organization.

The Executive Committee of the Queens County Democratic organization completed its slate yesterday with the designation of the following candidates to run in the primary elections in September: State Senator, Second District, Frank Adel, former Assistant District Attorney of Queens; Assembly, Second District, Bernhard Schwab; Third District, John Kennedy, for renomination; Fourth District, John N. Maloy, and Sixth District, William O'Hare, for renomination.

Dr. Arthur E. Keating, deposed Democratic leader of Queens, announced he would enter the primaries for the nomination for Sheriff in opposition to William M. George of Woodhaven. Keating said he would put a complete opposition ticket in the field in an effort to defeat the Connolly organization. Candidates already selected are County Judge Burt J. Humphrey for Justice of the Supreme Court; Stanley Fowler, Congress, Second District; State Senator August Farrenkopf for County Clerk; former Assemblyman George Polhemus for Senator, Second District, and Thomas M. Quinn, ex-Sheriff, for Senator Third District.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Forty-six free and clear Bronx lots were reported sold yesterday to an investor in one of the largest deals of the year affecting unimproved property in the borough. The lots comprise the greater portion of the blocks bounded by the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, Valentine Avenue, 196th and 197th Streets. The property begins at 196th Street, where the frontage is 250 feet, extending along Valentine Avenue 375 feet and along Valentine Avenue 375 feet, the northerly line measuring 307.6 feet. The tract has been held at $200,000.

It was acquired about a month ago by the Hasco Realty Company, the seller, from Paul M. Herzog, in an exchange transaction negotiated by Electus T. Backus, which also involved the new twelve-story mercantile building at 44 to 50 East Thirty-second Street.

Former H. P. Davison House to be Altered Into Apartments.

In order to capitalize the existing demand for small apartments, Isidore Book, operator, has purchased the former residence of Henry P. Davison at 12 West Fifty-first Street, a five-story house on a lot 22 by 100.5, a Columbia College leasehold. Extensive alterations are planned by the new owners, who plan to convert the house into an apartment building, with small suites. The property is now used by the Y. W. C. A. as a hostess house. This organization has possession until Aug. 15.

Mr. Davison occupied the house up to the time he completed his new home at Park Avenue and Sixty-ninth Street. The house just sold was built by W. W. and T. M. Hall about ten years ago, and is assessed by the city at $112,000.

Adds to Downtown Holdings.

Samuel Brody has purchased from Florence McAndrews of Surrey, England, represented by the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, the six-story building at 55 Water Street, on a plot 28.1 by 86.10, at the corner of Cuylers Alley. William A. White & Sons negotiated the sale. Mr. Brody recently purchased the property at 236 South Street and 177 South Street.

The Dwelling Demand.

Grace L. Hooper has sold the three-and-a-half-story dwelling at 517 West End Avenue to a client of Pease & Elliman, for occupancy. The house covers a lot with a frontage of 20 feet and an irregular depth and is located 30 feet south of the corner of Eighty-fifth Street.

Helen A. Titus has acquired from Josiah H. De Witt, as guardian, the five-story American basement residence at 321 West 100th Street, on a lot 20 by 100.11, near Riverside Drive.

Buys Tenement Near Court House Site.

Mary Clinton and others have sold to an investor the five-story front and rear tenement at 472 Pearl Street, on a plot 28 by 112, adjoining the Court House site. Nicholas F. Walsh was the broker.

Another Tenement Deal.

The five-story tenement at 2,487 Second Avenue, on a lot 24.4 by 100, 25 feet north of 127th Street, has been sold by the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company.

Bronx Sales.

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company has sold the plot of six lots at the northwest corner of Grant Avenue and 166th Street, measuring 156 by 100 feet.

Brooklyn.

Mrs. Amelia C. Candee sold to a client of Charles E. Rickerson, for occupancy, 293 Garfield Place, a four-story dwelling, between Eighth Avenue and Prospect Park West.

Queens Borough Sales.

Joseph Chmela sold to John D. Mattson the dwelling and plot on the southeast corner of Ely and Grand Avenues, Long Island City.

Plans Great Neck Residence.

Richard D. Wyckoff, proprietor of the Wall Street Magazine, has purchased the southerly half of the country estate of the late Gilbert M. Plympton, at Great Neck, fronting on Bayview Avenue, the west shore drive on Great Neck peninsula. Mr. Wyckoff intends to erect a country home designed in the Italian style of architecture, from plans by C. A. Patterson.

Joseph P. Day was the broker in the transaction. Negotiations are also reported pending for the sale of the northerly half of the estate.

Commercial Leases.

M. & L. Hess, Inc., sublet for the Illustrated Potal Card and Novelty Company, the entire fifth floor in the New York Railway Company Building at 141-155 East Twenty-fifth Street, through to 140-156 East Twenty-fifth Street, containing about 40,000 square feet. The lessee is the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who will use the premises as headquarters for its distribution of advertising matter. The lease is for a term of years at an aggregate rental of about $150,000.

Bleiman & Co. leased for the Thirty-second-Thirty-third Street Corporation, the stores and basements at 6 and 8 West Thirty-third Street to Zadek Brothers, now at 6 West Thirty-second Street.

A Recent Buyer.

The Henry A. Kessel Company, the tenant, is the buyer of 35 Pearl Street reported sold last week by William A. White & Sons.

BECKER IS TO RUN ON LEWIS TICKET

Announcement was made yesterday that Alfred L. Becker, Deputy Attorney General, would be a candidate for the nomination for Attorney General in the Republican primaries on the ticket headed by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis as candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination. His opponent on the Whitman ticket is Senator Charles D. Newton of Livingston County.

It was the general opinion among Republicans yesterday that Mr. Becker would be in a position to make a telling fight in the primaries and that his designation would greatly strengthen the Lewis ticket. Mr. Becker in all probability will be the only candidate on it besides the Attorney General, for the proposal of placing a man in the running for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor against Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck in all probability will be abandoned. Mr. Becker takes the place of First Deputy Attorney General Harold J. Hinman, who recently withdrew as a candidate for Attorney General on the Lewis ticket to accept a nomination for the Supreme Court in the Albany district.

Mr. Becker has been in the limelight constantly for many months as the principal prober of pro-German propaganda and activities in the Attorney General's office. He conducted the investigation into the Bolo Pacha case which ended with the conviction and execution for high treason of the French adventurer. He has been in charge of the Attorney General's office in this city since Mr. Lewis became Attorney General. Recently he has had charge of the Dr. Rumely-Evening Mail inquiries, involving Louis N. Hammerling and Sylvester Viereck, and the Roessler-Hasslacher Chemical Works hearings. ings.

Soon after the Bolo Pacha case was cleared up, Mr. Becker conducted an investigation into activities of Hugo Schmidt, American representative of the Deutsche Bank, who paid over the $1,700,000 von Bernstorff fund to Bolo Pacha, and of Adolph Pavenstedt, a German banker, who was counsellor and aid to Count von Bernstorff, late German Ambassador to the United States. Both Schmidt and Pavenstedt have since been interned, as a result of the disclosures made by Mr. Becker. At present he is engaged in an important inquiry for the French Government involving Senator Humbert, who is now being held by the French Government on suspicion of having been implicated in the Bolo Pacha case. Mr. Becker said last night at Lewis headquarters in the Murray Hill Hotel that in all probability he would be too busy to make much of a campaign.

Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, campaign manager for Attorney General Lewis, went to Washington late yesterday on some errand the purport of which was not made known. Attorney General Lewis himself expects to leave the hospital in Saratoga where he has been recovering from the injuries sustained in an automobile accident tomorrow, and is expected in this city on Friday.

CONNOLLY AND ROY CHOSEN.

Will Be Democratic Candidates for Supreme Court Nominations.

Borough President Maurice E. Connolly of Queens and County Judge Robert H. Roy of Brooklyn will be the organization candidates in the September primaries for the Democratic nominations for the Supreme Court in the Second District. This was agreed upon yesterday afternoon at a conference of the Democratic County Chairmen of Kings, Queens, Nassau, Suffolk, and Richmond Counties, which make up the district. The selections were later indorsed by the Kings County Democratic Executive Committee, meeting at the headquarters in Court Square. Assistant Corporation Counsel William B. Carswell of Brooklyn made a fight for a place on the ticket, but the leaders favored Judge Roy.

The Kings County leaders also picked County Judge Charles J. McDermott and Magistrate J. Grattan MacMahon as the organization candidates for the County Court nominations. The two vacancies to be filled were caused by the election of Judge John F. Hylan to the Mayoralty and of Judge Lewis L. Fawcett to the Supreme Court. At the meeting of the Brooklyn leaders Senator Thomas H. Cullen was agreed upon as the candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, and James P. Maher for Congress in the Seventh District.

HEARST IS EXPECTED TO DROP OUT OF RACE

On what appeared to be excellent authority, it was reported in Democratic circles yesterday that William R. Hearst would not enter the Democratic primaries and make a fight against Alfred E. Smith, President of the Aldermen. The report was circulated after it had become known that L. J. O'Reilly, head of the Water Supply Board in the Hylan administration and confidential representative of Mr. Hearst, had ordered the work of obtaining signatures to Hearst petitions discontinued.

It was learned that nearly 9,000 signatures had been obtained when the order went out. Mr. Hearst had set his heart on obtaining 25,000. But even the 9,000 signatures are 6,000 more than would be required to give Mr. Hearst's name a place on the Democratic ballot.

William Church Osborn, although convinced that Mr. Hearst has been forced to abandon his plan to run for Governor, will continue in the race as Mr. Smith's sole opponent in the Democratic primaries. He had a conference at his headquarters in the Hotel Manhattan yesterday with Colonel Robert Grier Monroe, who, it is reported, will manage his primary campaign. Osborn petitions are being circulated and plans made for a speaking campaign.

TANNER TO OPPOSE FRANCIS

Ex-Chairman of Republican State Committee Will Run for Congress.

Frederick C. Tanner, ex-Chairman of the Republican State Committee, announced yesterday that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Eighteenth Congressional District, now represented by Congressman George B. Francis, and that he would make his campaign on the loyalist issue. The sole reason for Mr. Tanner, who has a lucrative law practice, entering the fight is a pacifist speech made by the present incumbent in the House of Representatives on April 5, last year, when the resolution declaring a state of war with Germany existing was up for final action.

Mr. Francis said he represented "a constituency which is overwhelmingly in favor of peace at the present time," and announced that he would vote for the state of war resolution solely for the purpose of averting "malicious attacks" on his constituents, who were largely of German descent, indicating at the same time that if he thought his own vote could have changed the final result it would have been cast against the resolution.

"I think a premature peace would be the worst finish this war could possibly have," said Mr. Tanner yesterday, when he made his announcement. "Mr. Francis has shown the white feather once, and he may show the white feather again if he is left in the House of Representatives."

BOGUS DETECTIVES HOLD UP APARTMENT

LOCK VICTIMS IN FLAT

Six men representing themselves to be "detectives" from the West One Hundredth Street Station took possession of an apartment at 18 West 101st Street, occupied by Thomas F. Clelland, a mechanic at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and his wife and Mrs. Orphar McDonald, wife of an officer on an American torpedo destroyer in foreign service, and robbed them of $2,000. When the victims remonstrated the bogus officers threatened them with arrest and displayed blackjacks and clubs.

Detectives Marron and Hauptman of the West 100th Street Station arraigned a prisoner in the West Side Court yesterday on a charge of grand larceny in connection with the robbery at the Clelland home. He described himself to be Frederick W. Lentz, 25 years old, of 2,533 Church Avenue, Brooklyn. The police say Clelland and the two women identified Lentz as the leader of the invaders of their apartment. Magistrate Marsh held him in $5,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

Early on Saturday morning Clelland and his wife and Mrs. McDonald, who came here from her home at San José, Cal., when her husband went overseas, had returned from a theatre party, and had been home only a few minutes when the hall door was shaken and then struck with the end of a club apparently. In reply to Clelland's question a voice in the hall said a messenger had a telegram for him. When Mrs. McDonald opened the door a stout youth pushed her aside and entered, followed by two others. Then three more men pushed into the room.

"We are detectives from the West One Hundredth Street Station," one of the invaders is reported to have said. "We're after evidence, and to investigate a complaint," he further announced. All of the six showed blackjacks. While three of the men guarded the door and cautioned the man and women to keep quiet, the others went through the rooms, opening bureaus, desks, and trunks, searching the place thoroughly and taking valuables worth $2,000. Then the men started to depart, but Clelland barred the way.

"Show me your authority for this search," he demanded. Clelland and his wife and Mrs. McDonald, the police say, identified Lentz and asserted that he, when Clelland got between him and the door, went to a telephone and pretended to call Police Headquarters and order a patrol wagon to take the persons in the apartment to the station. The men then hurried out to the hall, locking the door behind them.

Clelland got the door open and, running down three flights of stairs, saw the thieves in flight in an automobile. From the description given of the robbers by Clelland, Marrion and Hauptmann arrested Lentz on the elevated station at Columbus Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street. The police have received several similar complaints from the west side recently in which each of the robbers posed as a detective.

With a Victrola you can hear at will the kind of music you like best—you can have dance music whenever you want to dance, you can have the most famous bands entertain you with their stirring music—you can hear any music you want to hear.

There are Victrolas in great variety to suit every taste, and any of them will play for you any of the more than 5000 records listed in the Victor Record catalog.

The two styles illustrated are handy models for both outdoor and indoor use. Convenient for the porch, the lawn, in camp, in the canoe—wherever you want to take them. And in the home they are easily moved from one room to another as occasion may require.

There are Victor dealers everywhere and they will gladly demonstrate the Victrola and play any music you wish to hear.
